Fairfax Orders Moratorium On All New Building

Town Violated Law By Failing To Adopt Open-Space Proposal

By NELS JOHNSON

The Fairfax Town Council, reacting swiftly to news the town has violated state law by failing to adopt an open-space plan, last night slapped a 90-day moratorium on new construction. (Another Fairfax Town Council story, page 3.)

The council unanimously directed building inspector Thomas A. Klarenbach to halt issuance of building permits for all new construction in Fairfax, a decision to be reviewed in three months.

The council now will seek to adopt an open-space plan.

The moratorium was requested by state Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger, who noted that Fairfax failed to file with the plan by last Dec. 31, the deadline.

Younger noted in his letter to the town council that under state law, "No building permit may be issued, no subdivision map approved, and no open space zoning ordinance adopted, unless the proposed construction, subdivision or ordinance is consistent with the local open space plan.

"It is the opinion of this office . . . that there can be no issuance of building permits or approvals of subdivisions where an open space plan has not been adopted," according to Younger.

Advised by City Atty. Wallace S. Meyers that "it would be rather tragic to say no building permit should be issued" whatsoever, the council declared that permits for minor repair and improvements projects will be allowed.

The council, after learning from Meyers that the town would not be vulnerable to legal action if it works diligently toward adopting an open-space plan, appointed Mayor Frank J. Egger and Councilman Jean-Marie Mahoney as a committee charged to explore the possibility of hiring a planner to prepare the element.

The pair will report to the council at 8 p.m., April 22 in the Fairfax Women's Club.

The ban received an icy reaction from several members of the audience.

"Why now a big moratorium when you knew it was going to come about (the Dec. 31 adoption deadline)" declared resident Jerry Brown, who blamed councilmen for the situation, saying they had lagged in hiring a planning consultant.

Parks and Recreation Commission chairman Joann Walla added it is unfair to penalize developers simply because the town failed to comply with state law.

Former planning commissioner John J. Hourihan blamed Egger for the situation, saying the mayor has long recommended that the city slap a moratorium on development.

Responded Councilman Randall Garrison: "This is a new council. This is not a do-nothing council. We are going to get off the dime . . . This council is going to move."

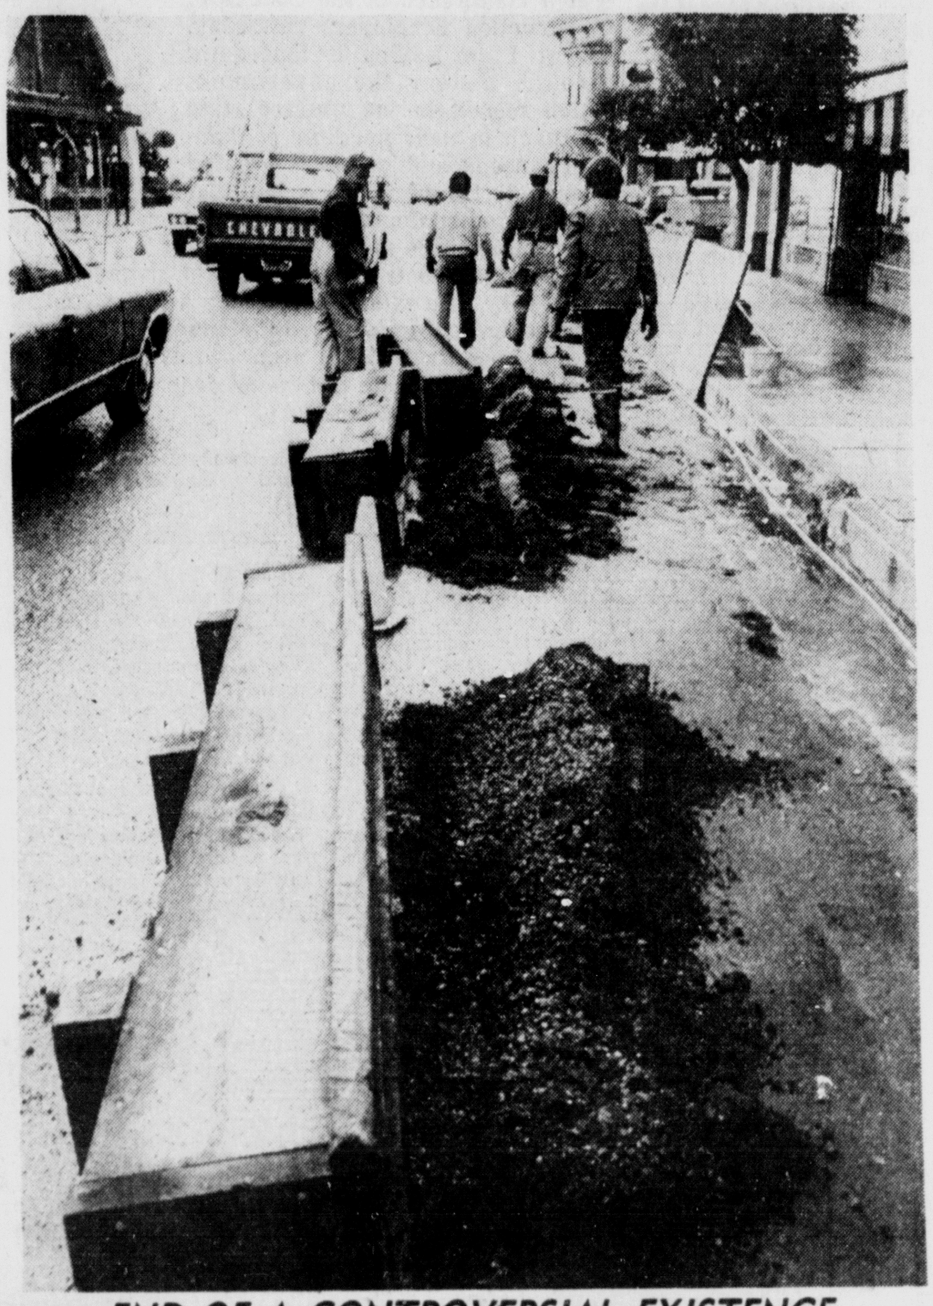
He called the moratorium a "temporary measure," and said much of the groundwork for an open-space element has been accomplished.

Meyers said he is uncertain what recourse citizens might have in the matter. "I don't know what citizens can do about it," he said.

In light of the moratorium, the council put over to April 22 consideration of an 80-unit development proposed for the Buon Gusto restaurant site owned by Eleanor McCardle Jean off Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, and consideration of a 20-unit development also proposed off the boulevard.

The postponement came at request of developers who asked for time to consider and clarify the attorney general's opinion.

Albert Bianchi, attorney for McKeon Construction seeking to develop the Buon Gusto site, entered council chambers just as the council prepared to endorse the moratorium. "A white cat crossed my path outside," he later told a reporter. "It's typical backassward Fairfax."



END OF A CONTROVERSIAL EXISTENCE

They were hated and applauded and once some irreverent soul even planted marijuana in them. Today the planter boxes, which arrived in Sausalito in 1971 as part of a temporary experiment to halt parking on part of downtown Bridgeway, ended their long, controversial life there. Workmen unceremoniously dumped the boxes, then hauled them away. Some will be donated to local schools and others will be sold to individuals. Their greatest foe — councilman Sally Stanford — wasn't present when they went, but she was exultant. "Well, they're finally gone, but I wonder what they (the council) will think of next," she snapped. The boxes will be replaced by bicycle paths.

$1.5 Million Asked Under County Plan

Panel Sees Housing, Water Need

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The county's proposed $4 million capital improvement program should include $1.5 million more to finance new programs listed in the county general plan, the Marin County Planning Commission recommended yesterday. (Another planning commission story, page 23.)

The amount includes $750,000 to subsidize low and moderate-income housing, $400,000 for waste water reclamation projects, $250,000 to subsidize animal waste control programs on dairies, and $100,000 toward purchase of "development rights" in selected areas.

The commission's unanimous recommendation came at the request of Sol Silver, chief of advanced county planning, who said the proposed capital improvement program does not take the county plan into consideration.

That program was drafted by the county administrator's office and concentrates on future expenditures for roads, parks and civic center improvements.

"A capital improvement program is one of the most effective ways that public financing necessary to carry out plan goals can be achieved," Silver said.

State law requires the planning commission to review the program and determine its "consistency" with the county plan, he added.

"We do not find any evidence that the capital improvement program bears a relationship to the adopted county plan and we are finding it extremely difficult to determine how monies budgeted in last year's program were expended . . ."

Silver said the program also contained no explanation on what happened to funds which were budgeted for projects last year but not used.

He recommended, and the commission endorsed, that the planning department have more say in developing next year's capital improvement program.

Silver and chairman William Long agreed to make such a request when the board of supervisors considers the program next Tuesday.

The $750,000 for housing would be used to purchase land on which developers would build low and moderate cost housing.

The county plan calls for 500 new units a year over the next 20 years. "Five hundred units per year would require securing approximately 10 sites suitable for about 50 units each," Silver said, estimating the county cost at $750,000.

"Inflationary factors may require adjusting this in succeeding years up to $1 million per year," he added.

Preservation of dairying as an industry will require county financial aid, he continued, and

Nixon's Policies Flayed By Albert

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker Carl Albert, insisting it was not a partisan attack, accused the administration today of disastrous economic policies that have led the nation to the brink of recession.

Albert, surrounded by fellow House demorratic leaders at a news conference, charged the administration with standing by idly "as stagnation engulfs the economy and millions of workers lose their jobs."

He cited rising inflation and unemployment and falling production and said they document the administration's "glaring failures."

"For more than 95 per cent of all Americans who must depend on their jobs and paychecks for their income and security, the Nixon administration's management or mismanagement of the economy has been disastrous," said Albert. "The average American worker clearly feels he and his family have been in a recession for more than a year."

Albert denied that his attack was the opening salvo in the 1974 political campaign, noting the campaign was already under way and that Democrats have won three of four Republican seats decided so far.

"It's not a campaign salvo," he said, "it's a report to the nation on what we in the Congress, on the Democratic side, think of the status of the economy."

The Oklahoma Democrat predicted the economy would be a bigger issue in the fall campaign than the Watergate scandal and said it would have no effect on Nixon's possible impeachment.

Albert insisted the administration, not the Democratic controlled Congress, was to blame for the state of the economy.

CARL ALBERT
Speaker of the House

"Time and time again congressional efforts to move this country forward have been frustrated by vetoes, impoundments and dismantling of programs," he said.

The effect of the administration's policies, he said, was to mov$ lion "from the pockets of move $10 billion "from the pockets of families to the pockets of the rich."

Albert said a tax cut might help the economy if the "situation deteriorates much more."

He echoed other congressional Democrats when he blamed the administration for the ineffectiveness of wage and price controls which are to expire at the end of this month.

Albert said it might be a good idea to extend the controls for another year but predicted Congress would not do so because "they have no political sex appeal."

Committee Will Start Hearing Impeachment Evidence May 7

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee today decided to begin hearing impeachment evidence against President Nixon on May 7, and to invite the President's lawyer to attend the closed session.

During a majority caucus, the 21 Democrats decided to invite James D. St. Clair, Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, into closed session.

"The general feeling is that we will make a presentation of summary in closed session and we expect Mr. St. Clair will be there," said Rep. John F. Seiberling, D-Ohio. "I don't see any necessity for Mr. St. Clair to be involved before May 7."

The decision came as the committee which is investigating whether grounds exist for Nixon's impeachment waited for St. Clair to reply to its request for 41 additional presidential tapes. The deadline for his reply was today.

Asked whether any decision on subpoenaing the tapes was made at the caucus, Seiberling said no. The committee had indicated it would go to court if necessary to get the material it said is absolutely necessary for its inquiry.

Seiberling said that during the closed session May 7, the committee will review the impeachment charges against Nixon and decide what — if any — allegations against the President should be dropped.

Seiberling said after the closed session the committee will conduct a "detailed presentation, calling witnesses."

St. Clair's role in the impeachment inquiry, if any, has been a major point of dispute between the White House and the committee.

The White House and many of the 17 Republican members of the committee have demanded that Nixon's lawyers participate in the deliberations and be given the right to question any witnesses.

Many Democrats, on the other hand, believe there is no need or legal precedent to afford St. Clair that privilege unless and until formal charges are brought against the President.

There was no firm indication from the White House what its reply would be to a six-week-old request from the House Judiciary Committee for 41 additional Presidential tapes it said it needed in its impeachment inquiry.

The committee threatened last Thursday to subpoena the requested tapes if it had not heard from Nixon by today.

Yesterday, John Doar, chief counsel to the committee, said he had received assurances from James D. St. Clair, Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, that the White House would indeed reply by today's deadline.

But St. Clair's letter to Doar, while saying "progress has been made" in the tapes negotiations, gave no indication whether the tapes would be delivered or whether there would simply be a reply to the demands.

The White House took a similar tack two weeks ago when Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski demanded that the White House comply with a subpoena for additional evi-

Messmer Loses Bid To Lead Gaullists

PARIS (UPI) — The official Gaullist candidate for the presidency of France, Jacques Chaban-Delmas, today rejected an appeal from Prime Minister Pierre Messmer to withdraw from the race.

Messmer thereupon announced he has given up his plans to run as the lone conservative candidate against the Communist-Socialist bloc.

Messmer called on the three serious Gaullist candidates to leave the field so he could fight alone against the single Left-wing nominee, Francois Mitterrand.

Chaban-Delmas saw Messmer for three minutes in the afternoon then told a news conference tonight: "My reply is negative. . . we must block the lone candidate of the Left-wing and I think I am the best candidate to do it."

Messmer said in a statement: "The conditions laid down not having been met, I have decided not to put forward my candidature. My decision is irrevocable."

Chaban-Delmas told 200 newsmen at his campaign headquarters near the Eiffel Tower France must remain faithful to the United States.

Chaban-Delmas, 59, an elegant, sports-loving World War II resistance hero, said: "We must safeguard the European unification already achieved, remain faithful to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, be faithful to the United States but regain our freedom of decision."

Chaban-Delmas thus became the first candidate openly to declare himself in favor of the Atlantic Alliance and close ties to the United States.

Political sources said Chaban-Delmas' decision probably would mean that Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing also would refuse to withdraw.

The third serious Gaullist contender, National Assembly President Edgar Faure, agreed to Messmer's request but said: "If everybody stays in the race, I shall rethink my attitude."

Saxbe Expects Break In Hearst Kidnaping

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General William B. Saxbe said today that he expects the FBI investigation of the Patricia Hearst kidnaping to produce results in the near future, the Washington Star-News reported.

"Now that the lid is off, I think we're going to see some results," the newspaper said Saxbe told a group of reporters Tuesday.

The Star-News quoted Saxbe as saying "We will apprehend the people involved in this case if they stay in this country."

The FBI has restricted its investigation somewhat because of fears for the life of Miss Hearst. But, Saxbe indicated, he feels the FBI has an implied go-ahead from the Hearst family to go all out to apprehend Miss Hearst's abductors.

In her last taped communique released by the Symbionese Liberation Army, Miss Hearst told her parents she had joined the SLA as a revolutionary fighter for the poor and the oppressed.

"Now that the family is not thinking she is going to be returned day by day and doesn't think the ransom will be adequate, this will give the FBI more freedom to operate," Saxbe was quoted by the Star-News.

"The bureau was doing every-thing to cooperate with the family."

Miss Hearst's parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst, and two of the abducted girl's sisters have gone to La Paz, Mexico for a four-day vacation.

Showers Off And On; Clear Skies Forecast

But the weatherman promised to turn off the rain machine and predicted fair, warmer weather for tonight and tomorrow.

Yesterday the county began the day with sunny skies and ended it with rain and at least two rainbows.

Rainfall reported around Marin in the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today: Sausalito, .70; Tamalpais Valley, .35; Homestead Valley, .50; Mill Valley, .38; Woodacre, .34, and San Anselmo, .22.

Special Election Filing Will Open

Filing for the June 4 special election in the Sixth Congressional District will open at 8 a.m. Thursday at the county elections office in the Civic Center.

Deadline to file nomination papers and pay the $425 filing fee is 5 p.m. on April 19.

The special election, coinciding with the regular primary, will be to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of William S. Mailliard. If no one wins a majority of the ballots cast on June 4, a special runoff will be held on July 2.

Winner of the special election will serve only the remainder of Mailliard's term, which expires at the end of this year.

Also on the June 4 ballot, is the regular primary, with candidates for the full two-year term in the House of Representatives. Adding to the complexity, the special election will be in the old Sixth District, but the regular primary will be for the new Fifth District.

Both include all of Marin, but the Fifth District shifts territory in San Francisco and adds rural Petaluma.

Another difference between the special election and the regular primary is that in the special all voters will have the same ballot, with the names of all candidates, regardless of party, whereas the primary portion of the ballot will vary according to party.

This means, for example, that Republicans can vote in the special for Democrats and that independents will have partisan candidates on their ballots, while in the primary portion they will have only their own party candidates.

Another result of the unique election is that the winner will appear on the November general election ballot as an incumbent. Most candidates in the regular election are expected to run as well in the special, although they will have to pay separate filing fees.

Candidates who cannot pay the filing fee, however, can submit nomination papers at no cost. These candidates will be required to file declarations that to pay the fee would deprive them of life's necessities.

The runoff will be among the top vote getter in each of the four parties recognized by the state, Republican, Democratic, Peace and Freedom and American Independent. Anyone from any other party must appear on the ballot as an independent, and will be in the runoff only if he gets more votes than the leading candidate in the four recognized parties.

Senator Bares IRS Probe Efforts For White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top White House officials tried to use federal agencies ranging from the Internal Revenue Service to the parole board for political purposes, documents made public by Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr., R-Conn., showed.

Weicker made public a thick stack of exhibits he presented yesterday to members of three Senate subcommittees holding joint hearings on government wiretapping.

Most were copies of once secret White House memos.

"Bringing to the light of day those words and deeds guarantees far more than legislation (would) that never again will Americans commit or submit to matters that repudiate the origins of our national greatness," Weicker said in presenting the documents.

Weicker's exhibits were entitled Internal Revenue Service; "Millhouse;" Brookings (Institute); Goldberg; (Billy) Graham, (John) Wayne —IRS Activity; Newsday; Military Spying; Department of Commerce; Parole Board and Justice Department; Department of Defense; and White House Activities.

The Internal Revenue Service Exhibit carried a July 24, 1969 internal memorandum on the formation of the IRS Activist Organizations Committee, which was disbanded last August at the time of the Watergate hearings.

"What we will attempt to do is to gather intelligence data on the organizations in which we are interested and to use a Strike Force concept whereby all Compliance divisions and all other Service functions will participate in a joint effort in our common objective," the IRS memo by D. O. Virdin said.

An Aug. 14, 1970 memo from White House aide Tom Charles Huston asked for an IRS progress report on the review of "operations of Ideological Organizations."

Commented Weicker: "They lumped ideological together with activist and militant."

In the exhibit on the satirical movie "Millhouse: A White Comedy," Jack Caulfield recommends to John W. Dean, III in a White House memo: "Release of (producer Emile) de Antonio's F.B.I. derogatory background to friendly media"

WEICKER ON STAND — Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr., R-Conn., testifies before three Senate subcommittees that the White House used federal agencies' confidential probes for its own purposes. (UPI Telephoto)

and "Discreet IRS audits of New Yorker Films, Inc."

The documents on the Brookings Institute indicate that Dean, then President Nixon's lawyer, considered tax audits and "turning the spigot off" of government contracts and $500,000 in federal grants. Weicker said the Institute was "A Democratic think-tank sometimes called a government-in-exile."

The tax exhibit indicates White House interest in audits being run on Evangelist Billy Graham and actor John Wayne, both friends of President Nixon.

"Can we do anything to help?" Dean asks in an Oct. 1, 1971 memo originally directed to aide Larry Higby, whose name was lined out.

"The Wayne complaint when viewed in the attached context does not appear to be strong enough to pursue," Caulfield concludes in an Oct. 6, 1971, memo to Dean.

The "attached context" refers to tax audits on "some individuals in the entertainment industry who were politically active during prior elections . . . (and) whose economic condition is similar to that of John Wayne."

Audited were Richard Boone, Sammy Davis Jr., Jerry Lewis, Peter Lawford, Fred MacMurray, Lucille Ball, Ronald Reagan, and Frank Sinatra.

The Newsday exhibit indicates that Caulfield and Dean in September and October, 1971, contemplated the threat of an antitrust suit against the Los Angeles Times to head off an anticipated series in Long Island's Newsday, adverse to the administration. The Los Angeles Times owns Newsday.

The military spying file related to the Army's 66th Military Intelligence Group probe of the expatriate American civilian "Concerned Americans in Berlin" organization which grew out of a (Sen. George) McGovern for President unit.

The Parole Board exhibit features a transcript of a taped 1971 conversation between White House aide Chuck Colson and George Smathers, former Democratic senator from Florida.

What Smathers proposed, according to the purported transcript, on Dec. 30, 1971, was that the President order the immediate release of Calvin Kovens, convicted of misuse of Teamster funds. Kovens' parole had been ordered, but he was to serve four more months, and he had suffered a heart attack, Smathers said.

Smathers said this would "give the President and those who are going to help him in this area, a very strong basis of going to the Jewish community" for support.

The Department of Defense exhibit contains a June 16, 1972, White House memo from Dean to H. R. Haldeman on "McGovern War Record" stating in part, "You should also be aware that there is nothing in McGovern's file which directly substantiates the allegation about his cowardice."

Desert Guns Roar As Syrians Prepare To Visit Washington

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Syrian and Israeli tanks and guns battled along the Golan Heights cease-fire line today only hours before a Syrian delegation was to leave for Washington to discuss with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger how to stop the fighting there.

A communique said the 29th consecutive day of combat began at dawn with battles around the slopes of Mt. Hermon, the Israeli-held peak overlooking the battlefield, and then spread to include tank and artillery duels all along the cease-fire front.

It said the artillery exchanges started "when the enemy tried to strengthen its forward positions" and "our forces are silencing the sources of enemy fire and are striking at its mechanized units. Our artillery is directing fire at key enemy positions."

Government sources in Damascus said the Syrian delegation to the disengagement talks with Kissinger would be arriving in Washington on schedule for the talks, due to begin tomorrow. This would mean, they said, that the mission would be leaving within 24 hours.

Meanwhile in Jerusalem, Prime Minister Golda Meir and her cabinet met today to review briefly Israel's unpreparedness for the October war but avoided the issue of Defense Minister Moshe Dayan's personal responsibility which has brought demands that he resign.

Political sources said Mrs. Meir and other ministers left the cabinet session to continue discussions on their next moves in the political crisis with leaders of her ruling Labor alignment.

The Syrian delegation, to be made up of military men and diplmats, will meet Kissinger and give to him their reaction to a disengagement plan presented by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

Dayan gave the proposal to Kissinger in Washington in March. Israeli newspapers said it called for an Israeli withdrawal from about two-thirds of the 325 square miles taken from the Syrians during the war.

The American secretary of state shuttled between Damascus and Jerusalem earlier in March but, for the first time in his postwar Middle East diplomacy, failed to bring about the agreement he wanted—to separate the Syrian and Israeli troops defuse the conflict.

U.S. officials in Washington have said it is likely he will return to the two capitals later this month once he has the positions of both sides in hand.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has said his nation will not give up political efforts for a settlement but will keep the military struggle going simultaneously.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

America Said In Deep Trouble

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unless the United States heeds the lessons of history "damn soon," Sen. Barry Goldwater says it will be in trouble so deep "it will never be able to get out."

Goldwater

"And I'm not talking about Watergate," the Arizona Republican told a conference of the Council of Construction Employers yesterday. "What I am saying is that down through history the government which turned to the welfare state approach in their handling of mankind's needs and comforts created its own destruction."

He expressed doubt that Americans realize how crucial things are in the United States.

"The situation is not a matter of slogans and wisecracks," he said. "It is deadly serious. And I suggest that unless we heed the lessons of history — and heed them damn soon — this country is going to find itself in trouble so deep that it will never be able to get out."

Trio Charged

LONDON (UPI) — Police today charged three men, each with suspected links with the Irish Republican Army (IRA), in the shooting death of a British army colonel and the wounding of two policemen.

The army officer, Lt. Col. John Stevenson, was killed when he answered the doorbell at his home near the Otterburn military training camp he commanded.

Police said all three — two Englishmen and a Scot — were accused of murdering Stevenson and one was charged with subsequently wounding two unarmed policemen sent to investigate the case.

Siege End Asked

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnam said today it has asked the Viet Cong to lift the 13-month siege of the Ranger base at Tong Le Chan and at two other government positions north of Saigon to allow food and medical attention to reach its starving and wounded troops.

A government spokesman simultaneously accused the Viet Cong of kidnaping 90 civilians yesterday throughout the country to fill its ranks, including 61 women and children working in a rubber plantation 40 miles north of the capital.

Auto Bomb Blasts

BELFAST (UPI) — A car stuffed with explosives blew up in downtown Belfast today, flattening several shops but causing no injuries, police said.

The owner of the car said Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunmen filled the vehicle with about 100 pounds of explosives and forced him to drive it into the downtown district after halting him at gunpoint in the Roman Catholic Falls Road area.

Fire At Plane

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian government antiaircraft batteries guarding the presidential palace in Phnom Penh opened up today when a commercial DC3 transport plane flew too close.

Authorities said later they believed the incident was nothing more than an accident and poor judgment on the part of the plane's pilot.

No Resignation

BONN (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said yesterday that President Nixon should not resign but rather face impeachment if it comes.

"I think the House Judiciary Committee has handled its responsibilities well, fair and objectively," he told a news conference. "If the committee were to recommend a bill of impeachment, I expect the House would act and the Senate be called to cope and deal with it.

Meat Import Ban

OTTAWA (UPI) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan announced yesterday that Canada would strictly enforce a ban on the import of all meat products containing the growth hormone DES.

The move could sharply reduce Canadian imports from the United States, which has not followed the decision of Canadian Health authorities to ban the hormone, which has been linked to cancer in mice.

Whelan said that, effective today, all meat imports would have to be accompanied by a certificate from the government of the country of origin guaranteeing that the meat never contained DES.

Fairfax To Seek Crowe Successor

The Fairfax Town Council last night called for applicants for the post of city administrator. (Another Fairfax Town Council story, page 1.)

The council, moving swiftly over the matter, endorsed a job description provided by Mayor Frank J. Egger which sets a salary of up to $20,000 "depending on experience."

Candidates for city administrator must hold a degree in public administration and have had municipal government and land use planning experience or their equivalent, according to the council.

The council set no deadline for applications.

Mayor Egger last night noted that the city has offered to allow suspended administrator Robert E. Crowe to prepare the town budget, but said Crowe has not responded to the city proposal.

Crowe was suspended indefinitely in March for his part in a postelection fracas. He faces a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon next Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

The Fairfax Town Council Also:

CAR — Told property owner E. J. Ezekiel to abate an abandoned auto on Spruce Road within 15 days.

SENIOR — Nominated Edward F. Kelly, 76, of 9 Park Road, for the annual Senior Citizen of the Year award.

DUPLEX — After voting 3-2 to reconsider a use permit requested for reconstruction of a burned-out duplex at 64 Frustuck Avenue, postponed further action for two weeks pending a study of parking matters. Councilmen Priscilla C. Gray and Albert E. Gately voted not to reconsider the permit requested by K. Abrahams and Gretchen A. Heneveld.

APPEAL — Denied an appeal by James Kennedy of 14 San Miguel Court of a police department denial of a hardship parking permit.

TAMALPAIS ROAD — Said that Tamalpais Road will remain one way from Mountain View Road to Scenic Road for five months on a trial basis, despite a letter from resident Jean Trombla asking that the road be switched back to two-way.

CONTRACT — Awarded a $19,025 contract to Sibbald Construction Co., low bidder, for work on the Arroyo Road retaining wall.

ROCK AND ROLL — Approved a rock and roll fund raiser April 19 at the Fairfax Pavilion subject to recommendations by Police Chief Charles A. Grasso. The event will benefit students enrolled in the On Location alternative school program at Redwood High School who plan to travel to Wash., D.C. on May 5 to work for Common Cause, a citizens' lobby.

FIREMEN — Called for applicants within 30 days for the post of fireman, and noted that women may apply since the city is an equal opportunity employer. Mayor Egger, noting that his colleagues had previously downgraded application requirements to allow several city volunteer firemen to apply for the post, said the requirements for fireman "don't look that tough."

SIGN ORDINANCE — Set 8 p.m. May 15 for a public hearing on the city sign ordinance.

FROSH — Allocated $600 to allow freshmen councilmen Randall Garrison, Priscilla C. Gray and Jean-Marie Mahoney to attend a "New Mayors and City Council Institute" May 15, 16 and 17 in Monterey.

APPEAL — Unanimously endorsed Garrison's suggestion that the city repeal a $10 fee required of residents appealing city actions.

VACANCIES — Again announced the city is seeking applicants for vacancies on the parks and recreation commission, design and environmental review board, board of review and performing arts board.

COMMITTEES — Made the following council appointments: Egger, library committee; Gately, open space committee; Garrison, Redwood Division of League of California Cities representative, annexation committee, and Association of Bay Area Governments alternate; Gray, tax equity committee, annexation committee, ree committee and school board committee; and Mahoney, Association of Bay Area Governments representative, open space committee, and Redwood Division League of California Cities alternate.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. April 22 in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Planners Tie Water Pipe To Development

The Cotati Planning Commission last night served notice to the city council that it will not act on any new building projects until the council upgrades the city's inadequate water system.

City planner Mark Thysen said the case which prompted the action was a 30-unit apartment complex proposed by DeWayne Strawther and Joseph Dorfman.

He said planning commissioners felt they were unable to approve the project because a water shortage is forecast.

Although city staff members have told the council that Cotati faces problems, the council has taken no remedial action beyond repairing a city well which will serve as a back-up supply pending completion of the Russian River-Cotati intertie system in 1976.

Cotati's chief water supply at present, Thysen said, is the aqueduct between Petaluma and Forestville. But Cotati's system of mains and pipelines was designed to serve 1,000 inhabitants and more than 2,500 now use it.

The Cotati Planning Commission Also:

VACANCY — Urged residents to apply for the seat of commissioner Barney Nestor, who died last month.

CENTER — Continued to April 22 a hearing on a request by Codding Enterprises for an additional 15,000 square feet of land for the Rancho Cotate Shopping Center at 620 East Cotati Avenue. The planners requested more information from developers and asked Rohnert Park officials to present their views on the matter, since the center is within 500 feet of that city's boundary.

ZONING — Recommended rezoning from residential to agricultural use a 12-acre parcel at 8710 Cypress Avenue so it will be compatible with surrounding land. The owner reportedly has no development plan.

IMPROVEMENTS — Instructed staff to update the city's five-year list of needed capital improvements, reaffirming the high priorities given earlier to water improvements, sewer improvements and park development, in that order.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. April 22.

Bagley Wins On Airline Food Tax

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill to exempt from the sales tax all hot food used by interstate and foreign airlines serving California has been signed into law by the governor.

The measure, AB 2151 by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, was requested by several airlines protesting attempts by the Board of Equalization to tax their food. The board opposed the bill in committee hearings.

The legislation exempts from sales and use taxes the sales of hot prepared foods by caterers or other vendors to such airlines for consumption by passengers. Bagley authored a 1971 law that extended the sales tax to all hot food, even if not consumed where bought, and the Board of Equalization used that law to try to tax airlines as well.

Tornado Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary James T. Lynn of housing and urban development has submitted a detailed written report to President Nixon on the condition of areas devastated last week by tornadoes.

Poll Shows Nixon Stock Is Climbing

NEW YORK (UPI) — With more public appearances, President Nixon's standing with the American people has began to climb from its alltime low, according to the latest Louis Harris poll.

The President's popularity rose five points to 31 per cent in March from the low points of 26 per cent a month earlier, the Harris Survey said it found in a poll of 1,495 household.

"The President, however, is by no means out of the woods," Harris reported of the survey conducted March 24-29.

The period covered by the survey was prior to a Congressional committee's report that the President's tax returns were deficient in the amount of more than $400,000. Nixon has said he will pay the taxes, along with interest and any penalties.

"One bottom line indication that the President is still in real trouble emerged when by 49-34 per cent, a plurality of the people agreed with the statement that "when all of the investigations and crises have finished, President Nixon will be found to have violated the law, as was true with Vice President Agnew."

Agnew resigned when he pleaded no contest to a tax law violation.

The President's ability to inspire confidence was rated "only fair-poor" by 78 per cent to 15 per cent for "goodexcellent," which Harris said was the lowest since Nixon took office in 1969.

dence. The President's lawyers promised "a reply" by Jaworski's March 29 deadline, but at the last moment surrendered the subpoenaed material.

Jaworski had been prepared to go to court to seek enforcement of his subpoena, just as the House committee now is ready to take the subpoena route.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., called a meeting for later this week to possibly seek authority to issue a subpoena "in light of Mr. St. Clair's reply."

He said the committee must be prepared to meet its "constitutional responsibilities" in the event the White House refuses to comply with the request for more tapes.

"I really don't have anything to say," Presidential press spokesman Gerald Warren told reporters yesterday. "We are dealing with this committee in what we believe is a responsible way; and for our part in a spirit of confidentiality."

Doar also told the committee that the staff has asked for information on Nixon's 1969-72 income taxes, the years the IRS found he owed $432,000 because of improper deductions.

The staff is also studying data gathered by a joint House-Senate committee in its report on the back taxes to determine if it might be among grounds for impeachment.

CAPITAL

urged $250,000 be budgeted to provide low-interest loans to ranchers faced with upgrading animal waste treatment facilities.

Another possibility includes purchase and leaseback of the facilities, he said.

About $400,000 should be set aside for waste water reclamation projects. The cost of such projects could be financed on a matching funds basis with water and sanitary districts, Silver said.

The $100,000 requested for purchase of "development rights" would be placed in reserve until $500,000 or $600,000 is saved, giving the county the financial means to block development or open space lands (in some areas) without outright purchase.

Commissioners, in backing Silver's report, said they agreed with the content but not the harsh tone in which he questioned preparation of the county capital improvements program. A separate letter will be sent from the commission to the board outlining its recommendations.

Commissioners Margaret B. Azevedo and Rebecca Watkin were absent.

Performing Arts Situation Eyed

The Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Commission appointed a committee last night to study whether the city should continue providing rent-free space in its golf clubhouse for the privately run Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts.

The center has used the clubhouse for several years. But, according to parks and recreation director Don L. Dimitratos, new regulations on use of city facilities require that the center reapply each year for permission to stage plays in the clubhouse.

Commissioners James B. Arbios and Phyliss Joseph will study the question, Dimitratos said.

Drinking Is Major Fatal Crash Factor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Drinking is a factor in at least half of the fatal motor vehicle accidents, according to many studies.

In Vermont, for example, 56 per cent of the fatally injured drivers tested under 20 years of age had blood alcohol concentrations of 20 milligrams and under. The surveys show a disproportionate number of fatal accidents involved drivers under 25, the National Safety Council says.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Buyers Of Art Are Cautioned

Everyone's an art critic. Somebody said that "old masters are not art; their value is in their scarcity."

The demand for art has increased so rapidly that the demand exceeds the supply. Buyers must look out for overpricing, fraud, and dishonest sellers and illegal dealers. Be sure to read "disclaimers" when buying.

Demand for art has increased the sales of art prints. To provide protection to buyers against dishonest dealers, California passed the first "art print" law in the United States. Sellers must give certain information to buyers, such as artist's name, year when the print was made, and the authorized number of signed or unsigned prints. They must include number or unnumbered impressions, size of editions, what has happened to the plate and other general information.

The buyer is protected as long as the seller is reputable. The trouble is that intentional fraud, misrepresentation, or even unintentional fraud, a forged signature, a mislabeled print is difficult to detect.

When there is misrepresentation, mislabeling, or mistake, the buyer can sue for his money back. There are no regulatory agencies or enforcement bodies to check on compliance with the "Art Print Law," and the law only applies to prints made after July 1971; not to earlier prints. A buyer can seek recision, restitution, or money damages.

To show violation of the law, the buyer must prove that the seller knowingly mislabeled or made false claims.

The seller may make certain disclaimers of knowledge about the print. If these are brought to the attention of the buyer, the buyer must use his own judgment. When new discoveries are made after the purchase it is hard to remedy the deception.

Disclaimers may also be stated on sales receipts. A seller may state on the sales slip that he has no knowledge of the originality of the print. It would then be difficult to prove the seller made oral statements different from statements on the sales slip. Printed ambiguous information may make proof of fraud or mislabeling difficult.

The burden is still on the buyer to evaluate the information given. He must use wisdom in making his purchase, even from a reputable dealer.

Old College Bar Victim Of Times

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — "The Sink," a corner bar near the University of Colorado campus, has become a victim of changing times. It's being shut down to make room for a delicatessen.

"The youths are a different breed nowadays," said Herb Kauver, who has owned the bar since 1958. "I just don't think they want to be as friendly, but basically, they are still good kids.

"The drug scene hurt, too."

The advent of "street people" throughout this Rocky Mountain college town turned a number of students sour on the idea of spending afternoons in the dim light of the bar. "A lot of kids didn't like that action," he said.

Kauvar said his new "Herb's Delicatessen," which opens this week would continue to serve 3.2 beer "but we won't be anything like the old place. . ."

Bataan Veterans Bury A Comrade

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Sixty survivors of the Bataan Death March buried a comrade yesterday on the eve of the 32nd anniversary of the 90-mile trek through the Philippine jungles in World War II.

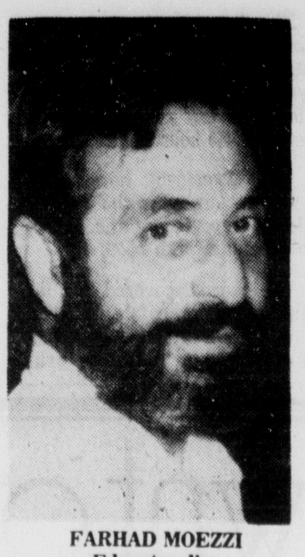
The survivors were to observe the anniversary today by raising a white flag, symbolic of the surrender of American forces on the Bataan peninsula.

The forced march of more than 9,000 American troops by the Japanese began on April 9, 1942. Only one out of seven men survived.

Big California Tomato Harvest

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California farmers produced 4.8 million tons of processing tomatoes in 1973, just under the record tonnage of 4.9 million set in 1968. The 1973 crop was valued at $199 million, compared to the 1968 record of $203 million.

California produces 80 per cent of the tomatoes for processing in the nation. Processing tomatoes are those used for juice, canned paste, puree and sauces.



FARHAD MOEZZI
Educator dies

OBITUARIES

Sculptor Farhad Moezzi, 53

Farhad Moezzi, chairman of the College of Marin art department, died Sunday in a San Francisco hospital after a lengthy illness. He was 53.

No local service is planned. His ashes will be returned to his native Iran.

Moezzi had been ill since November but had returned to his teaching duties at the college for the spring semester before entering the hospital last month.

Born and reared in Teheran, Moezzi received a bachelor's degree in archeology from the University of Teheran. He traveled to India where he studied Middle Eastern languages at the University of New Delhi and also studied at the University of London.

Moezzi came to the United States in 1947 to continue his study of ancient languages but enrolled in San Francisco State College and decided to study art instead. He received bachelor's and master's degrees from that college.

He taught art at San Rafael High School before joining the college of Marin faculty in 1966.

Moezzi did work in sculpture, ceramics, jewelry and metal craft, relying on personal research for most of his knowledge. He did his own casting in bronze, aluminum and nickel silver.

Moezzi traveled around the world in 1966 and had one-man art shows throughout the United States. He also participated in many group shows.

Local critics praised his show last spring at the DeYoung Museum and he was planning a show at a private gallery on Union Street in San Francisco. He had also received an invitation for a show at the Los Angeles Civic Center.

Moezzi was the past president of the Marin Society of Artists and maintained a studio at the Northgate Industrial Park. He was also a member of the San Francisco Potters Association.

He was named in the 1971 awards volume of the Outstanding Educators in America.

Moezzi is survived by his wife, Patricia, three daughters, Rameen, Mithra and Kambia, and a son, Ravan, all of the family home, 10 Portola Avenue, San Rafael; his father, Nh Moezzi of Teheran; a sister, Nezhat Moezzi of Teheran; and two brothers, Firouz Moezzi of Teheran and Barry St. John of Palo Alto.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the Moezzi sculpture fund of the Associated Students of the College of Marin. Donations will be used to fund construction of a base for a Moezzi sculpture recently purchased by the students. It will be mounted in the central campus mall area facing the student center.

Old Town Is Coming To Life

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A sign on the western terminus of the Pony Express says "Beds 15 to 20 cents," but that's going to change.

Across the street the Pioneer Telegraph Building, where the first transcontinental message was received in 1861, has already been restored.

And the arrival point for the first transcontinental railway train, in 1869, is scheduled to become a comprehensive railway museum.

Old Sacramento, a Gold Rush river port when San Francisco was still known as Yerba Buena, is rising from its ruins.

The first eastbound Pony Express rider saddled up in front of the B. F. Hastings Building on April 14, 1860, according to a historical marker. In those days, this patch of land on the Sacramento River was booming.

But as urban planners now know, historic areas sometimes go downhill. By the 1930s, Old Sacramento was the largest market center west of Chicago for migrant day laborers. It had turned into a dreary slum long before restoration was considered in the 1950s.

At one point it was going to be bulldozed down for a freeway. But the restorers forced the highway builders to make a jog around it.

Thus Old Sacramento stands today, 28 acres of river bank cut off from the rest of the city by a freeway. There are about six blocks of building, of which about 120 are considered worthy of restoration or reconstruction — 41 of them built from 1849 to 1870.

About 20 buildings have been restored, and contracts have been let for most of the rest. The restorers hope to have two thirds of the area restored by July 4, 1976, when a celebration is to be held in connection with the U.S. Bicentennial observance.

With luxury restaurants, specialty shops, museums and ordinary business offices, Old Sacramento is expected to eventually play host to half a million visitors a year, spending upwards of $20 million.

A Rock Will Be Included In Town's Square

DOVER, Ohio (AP) — The city has planned to refurbish the city square, but no one seems to know what to do with the rock.

What rock? That's what Dover residents say. "What rock. Oh, that rock."

The square will have a fish pond, benches, the old city hall bell, the Ten Commandments monument, a public signboard and a new flagpole. And, one supposes, the rock.

It once reposed on the front lawn of the W. W. Scott house. Scott was a publisher here in the 19th century. The rock is ordinary sandstone common here, weathered and dark.

The local best guess as to its raison d'etre is that Scott had it brought from the battlefield at Chattanooga, Tenn., after the Civil War. There's a story he took cover behind it, and it saved his life. But the story is unconfirmed.

JOHN T. STOLL

John T. Stoll of Mill Valley, an artist who drew upon his experiences as a seaman and became known as "the painter of the sea," died yesterday at a local hospital after a long illness. He was 84.

Stoll of 491 Ethel Avenue was a painter, sculptor and etcher. His works are represented in collections throughout the Bay Area, including the San Francisco Museum of Art, the Oakland Art Museum and the California Palace of the Legion of Honor.

Stoll creations also are a part of collections in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and at Buckingham Palace in London.

He was commissioned for six murals exhibited at the Golden Gate International Exposition in 1939 and 1940. Displayed at the Sailors' Union of the Pacific are two works, a four-section mural and a monument in black granite, in memory of fighting men lost in World War II.

Stoll painted a 21-foot mural of famous sailing ships for the American President Lines' President Polk. He designed the original seal for the Bank of America and once worked for the W. J. Sloan Co. in San Francisco, an interior decorating firm.

A native of Germany, Stoll studied at the Academy of Fine Arts in Dresden. As a young man, he signed aboard German sailing vessels and his seagoing days were to influence his work during 65 years as an artist.

Stoll came to the U.S. in 1912, settling in San Francisco and later becoming a naturalized citizen. He was a resident of Marin 20 years, living originally in Larkspur and in Mill Valley since 1960.

HOHWIESNER — Frederick M. Hohwiesner, a San Francisco insurance broker for more than 60 years, died April 2 in a San Francisco hospital after a lengthy illness. He was 85.

He was born and reared in San Francisco and attended schools there. He became a broker with his father's insurance firm in San Francisco in 1912 and was associated with Hohwiesner and Co. for 50 years.

He and his wife, Faith, whom he married in 1922, moved to Kentfield in 1957 and have resided there since.

Mr. Hohwiesner joined Marsh and McLennan Inc. insurance brokers in 1962 and was still associated with the firm at the time of his death.

He held positions with local, regional and national insurance orgaizations. He was president of the Insurance Brokers Exchange of California, served three terms as president of the San Francisco Society of Insurance Brokers and was executive chairman for 16 years of the Insurance Producers of California. He was the first broker from the West Coast to be nominated chairman of the executive committee of the National Association of Insurance Brokers, then elected president and the only broker to hold this office for three years.

He was a member of the Merchants Exchange Club of San Francisco, the Olympic Club, California Golf Club, French Club, St. Claire Club, The Family, an honorary member of the San Francisco Press Club and a member of the Meadow Club here in Marin.

The old Hohwiesner home in San Rafael is often shown on house tours. His grandfather was a signer of the first San Francisco charter. He belonged to the Society of California Pioneers.

He is survived by his wife and daughter, Mina Hohwiesner of Kentfield.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco.

MOUNT TAMALPAIS CEMETERY in the Heart of our County

Marin pioneers chose a site in the heart of our county as a final resting place for their families. Today this location – at the west end of Fifth Avenue in San Rafael – is still convenient to all Marin points.

Marinites who choose Mount Tamalpais do so with the assurance that its beauty will grow with the years. The interest from a quarter-million dollar endowment fund – twice the legal requirement – is dedicated to the constant care and improvement of this 57-acre site.

Perhaps – like many Marin families – you wish to make your own final arrangements to spare others difficult decisions. If so, we invite your inquiry or a personal visit.

LOOKING FOR AN ARK

Gas Scene Continues To Improve

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The availability of gasoline continues to improve across the nation, the American Automobile Association said today in its 13th weekly report on fuel problems for motorists.

The AAA said this week's spot check on 6,080 stations showed but 3 per cent without fuel to sell, down from 5 per cent last week. The average price per gallon moved up a penny for regular, however, to 54 cents, with the price for premium stable at 57 cents.

The states of Hawaii, Illinois, New York and South Carolina had the highest average prices for regular fuel at 56 cents a gallon. Hawaii, Illinois, and New York had the highest average price for premium at 53 cents a gallon.

The lowest general price for regular was 49 cents in Rhode Island and Texas, with Texas also having the lowest average price for premium at 53 cents.

The report also showed:

Eighty per cent of the stations were open after noon on Saturday, compared to 73 per cent a week ago.

Of the stations surveyed, 2 per cent were closing by noon on weekdays, down from 3 per cent last week.

Fuel is pumped at 39 per cent of the stations after 7 p.m. on weekdays, up from 35 per cent a week earlier.

There were 30 per cent of perethe stations open Sunday, an increase from 27 per cent last week.

Felson Pledges To Save Rancho

Legislation to preserve some 20 acres of the historic Rancho Olompali property in Novato was promised yesterday by Jack R. Felson of Forest Knolls, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Ninth Assembly District.

The candidate said that, if elected, he would introduce legislation either to buy the acreage, at a cost he estimated at $200,000, or possibly impose an historical easement on it to preserve the ruins of the old hacienda and a buffer zone around the site.

On another issue, he urged citizens to join the conservationists' campaign against two bills by Assemblyman Ken McDonald, D-Ventura, that would weaken the power of the State Water Resources Control Board. One, AB 3070, in effect would bar releasing water from a dam to maintain downstream water quality without approval of upstream users.

The other, AB 3204, would require that water quality control plans adopted by the board be approved by the Legislature before it is effective.

Felson said the bills would "destroy water quality in California."

Streaking Trial Set For Gangster's Doll

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Liz Renay, once known as gangster Mickey Cohen's girlfriend, will stand trial April 24 for streaking.

Miss Renay, now 47, claims a 41-25-35 figure. She strolled nude across Hollywood Boulevard to publicize her appearance as a stripper. A crowd of more than 2,000 persons witnessed the event, since the time and place had been publicly announced the day before. She pleaded innocent yesterday to a charge of indecent exposure, brought on by a citizen's complaint.

Agriculture Aide's Nomination Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate yesterday confirmed President Nixon's nomination of Dr. Richard L. Feltner as assistant secretary of agriculture in charge of programs including the government's multi-billion dollar food relief system.

Feltner, 35, had been head of the Department of Agricultural Ecoomics at the University of Illinois. The Senate approved his selection for the $38,000 a year federal post by a routine voice vote without any controversy.

Milk pours the protein on.

For 28¢: half the protein you need each day.

Drink in this fact:
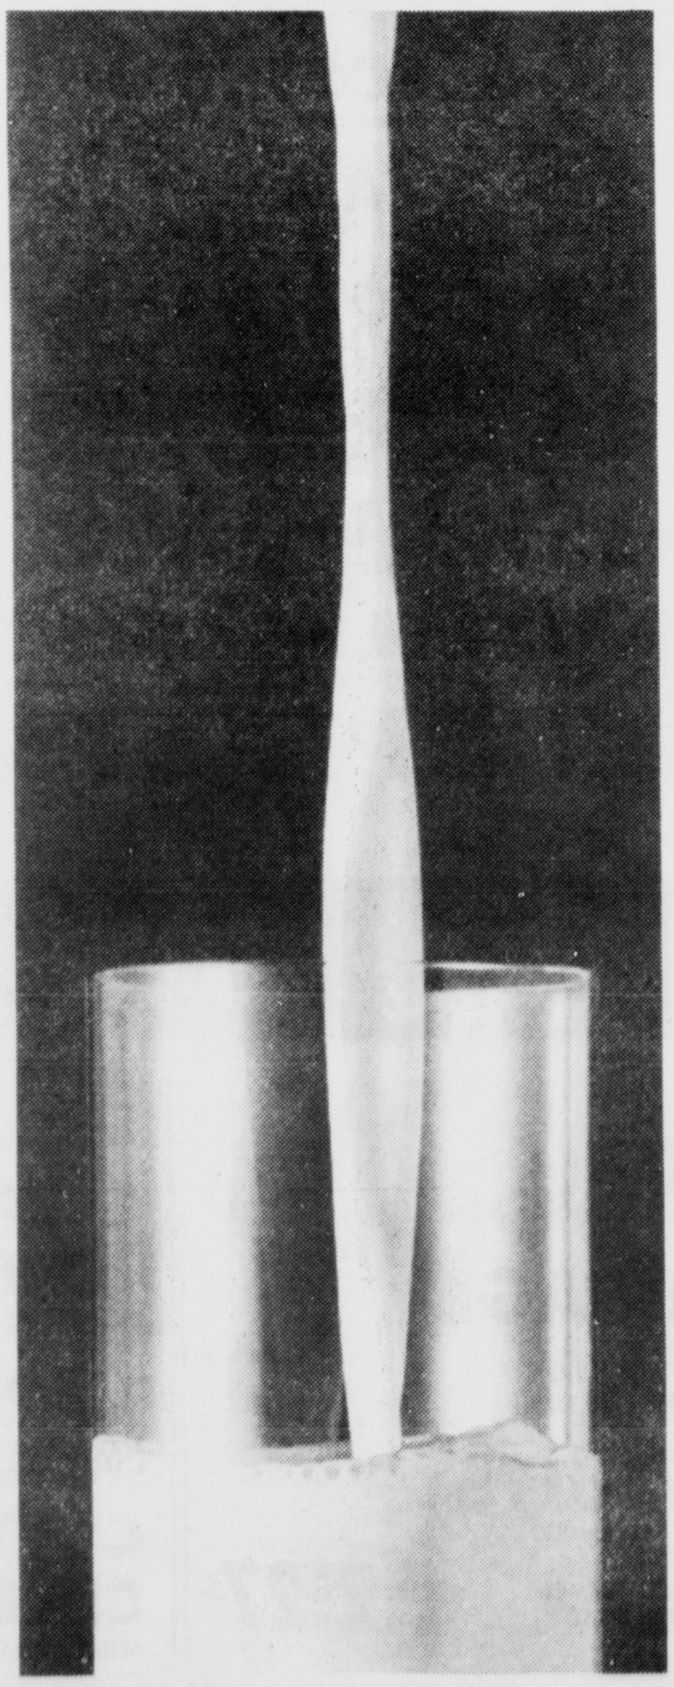
Because 28¢ is all it costs for three 8-ounce glasses of milk.
Compare that to what you'd pay for the same amount of protein in other foods. For example, two slices of calves' liver. Or half a cup of tuna chunks. Or...well, you name it.
In fact, just about the only protein you can get for less these days comes from certain dried peas, beans and nuts. (Yum.)



Now: does this mean you shouldn't eat meat or fish? Of course not, because they belong in balanced diets.
But if you're worried about the rising price of protein, now you know a low-cost way to pour it on.
In fact, you can really make a splash.

California Milk Advisory Board

P.S. Now we're going to pour on some important facts and figures...
1) When we say three 8-ounce glasses of milk a day, we mean 24 ounces in all. Which cost 28¢, based on the average price in California stores for one-half gallon.
2) The recommended daily allowance of protein is 45 grams. It's endorsed by the Food and Drug Administration, no less. (And three glasses of milk, by the way, contain precisely 25.5 grams of protein: more than half the recommended amount.)
3) All protein measurements from "Nutrition and Physical Fitness," W.B. Saunders Co., ©1973.
There now. Got the pitcher?

Subdivision Is Approved In Novato

An 18-lot subdivision on approximately seven acres on Hill Road between Canyon Road and Tamalpais Avenue was approved last night by the Novato Planning Commission.

Jack Kinney requested the subdivision to construct single family houses on the site.

The commission asked the Novato City Council that terms of the planning commission and all other appointed boards or committee expire at the end of June so that newly elected council members would have a chance at selecting members.

Postponed until May 13 was consideration of the environmental impact report and master plan for the Hanna Ranch development east of Highway 101 north of Highway 37 and west of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad.

The commission set April 22 for public hearings to reclassify 1.5 acres at 712 Tamalpais Avenue from single-family to duplex zoning, for Zahorenko Construction Co. and the same date to change the multiple zoned lots on San Marin Drive to single family for Kaufman and Broad Development Co.

A Simpler Lead Poisoning Test

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new fingerprick blood test provides a simple, reliable, and rapid technique for mass testing for lead poisoning in children.

The test requires only a few drops to analyze lead levels in the blood. The system, say its developers, is speedier, more reliable and lower in cost than previous ones.

DRUG ARREST

Rossi, 35, had no money to pay the $315 fine imposed by Superior Court Judge Carlos Velarde last week, so he offered one of his canvases, "Hollywood Cowboy," as payment.

Rossi was lucky enough to have been brought before a judge who is an art collector.

The judge said that in his opinion, the painting was very good and obviously worth more than the amount of the fine, and he would check with the county purchasing agent to see if it could be accepted as payment.

Pictures of Rossi and the painting appeared in newspapers and on television, and the publicity has given sales of his works a boost. "Hollywood Cowboys" was purchased by a real estate broker for $450, enough to pay the fine and Rossi's back rent.

"I've sold paintings for next to nothing just to survive," he said yesterday. "Now I'm hear-

Heroin Charge Guilt Is Denied

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A California man pleaded innocent yesterday to federal charges of possession with intent to distribute heroin in Des Moines last December.

No trial date was set and bond was set at $15,000.

Teacher Starts Nixon Tax Fund

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Mrs. Ann McDaniel, a retired school teacher, has opened a bank account for President Nixon and deposited $4.50 in it.

Mrs. McDaniel wants 99,999 other people to contribute $4.50 each so that a fund of $450,000 can be turned over to the President to help him pay his income taxes.

When she opened the account Friday at the First National Bank of Martinsville she said the fund would be a sort of belated Valentine for Mr. Nixon.

Control Of Forest Fire Is Seen

CLOUDCROFT, N.M. (UPI) — Fire crews today cut a 40-mile line around a 14,500-acre forest fire in southeastern New Mexico and predicted the blaze would be controlled by dark.

"The crews worked hard through the night building two parallel lines on the north side of the fire and if we can hold them when the winds pick up everything should be okay," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Frank Carroll.

The blaze, which exploded like a cyclone in winds up to 60 miles per hour Saturday, was contained inside the fire lines by 600 men. It had destroyed 14,469 acres of valuable timber in the Lincoln Natioal Forest and private land.

Parts of two towns were destroyed, but no resident was injured.

With the fire lines up, Carroll said crews expected the fire to burn itself out.

"It shouldn't have enough of a head to escape," he said.

About 300 residents of Weed and another small town, Sacramento, were evacuated last weekend after the fire erupted from an unattended campfire and spread through the tinder-dry forest in wind gusts up to 60 miles an hour.

The Forest Service said 21 buildings in the towns were charred.

Lee said residents had only a half-hour warning before the flames reached their homes.

"I looked up on top of the ridge above the town and saw smoke and a few flames," he said. "A moment later a tremendous heat and pressure wave hit and all of a sudden everything just exploded."

Ed Washard said his wife and five children lost everything "but a change of britches" when the flames swept their home in Weed. The village's only storekeeper, Jimmy Goss, said his grocery and gasoline station were burned by the fire.

University Picks Its New President

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — C. Peter Magrath, 40, president of the State University of New York at Binghamton, has been hired as president of the University of Minnesota at $60,000 per year.

Magrath will succeed Malcolm Moos, who is scheduled to leave in July to head the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Conspirator Tells $5,000 'Kill' Plan

MEDIA, Pa. (UPI) — Silous Huddleston, a confessed conspirator in the 1969 Yablonski slayings, was a surprise witness today when the defense opened its case in the murder trial of W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

Huddleston testified he was first contacted by United Mine Workers District 19 officials Albert Lass and William Prater to kill an attorney for a rival union for $5,000.

The witness, an ailing and pensioned miner, said he was later told the plans had been changed and that Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski was the target.

"I told him (Pass) he couldn't get it for no $5,000," the witness testified. "He told me the price was now $10,000."

Boyle, former UMW president, is charged with suggesting and then arranging payment in union funds for the aesassination of Yablonski, his bitter opponent in the union's 1969 presidential elections.

Before the defense opened its case, Judge Francis J. Catania dismissed motions by attorney Charles W. Moses, who asked for a retrial and claimed the prosecution had failed to present sufficient evidence.

Moses claimed he was restricted on examination of prospective jurors, on issues admitted in the trial and on cross-examination of a number of witnesses.

He claimed Boyle was "entitled to a full and searching examination of the transactions" and that he had been given "limited time to prepare intelligent cross-examination."

Catania, in dismissing all of Moses' objections, said "we feel there is sufficient evidence to go to the jury."

In its case, the defense was expected to suggest that officials from a bankrupt Appalachian union district conspired alone to kill Yablonski.

Belvedere-Tiburon Merger Talk Asked

Tiburon City councilmen last night invited Belvedere's City Council to meet on the long-discussed proposal of fusing their cities into one entity.

At the suggestion of Councilman Allan N. Littman, the council agreed to ask Belvedere representatives to discuss the question at Tiburon's May 13 meeting.

"I think it's an expensive and inefficient luxury to have two cities sitting next to each other running separate services while they share the same downtown. It makes sense to seriously sit down and talk about forming one city," Littman said.

Councilman Donald S. Tayer added that the city staff should prepare comparisons of the cost of such items as running two police departments versus the cost of a joint police department.

"We're not talking about annexation," said Councilman E. Bruce Ross. "We're talking about amalgamation."

The Tiburon City Council Also:

CONDOMINIUM CONVERSIONS — Referred to the planning commission for more study an ordinance to regulate conversion of apartment buildings into condominiums. The ordinance is to come back to the council by April 22.

ANNEXATION — Asked the city staff to report on possible annexation of Bel Aire and Reedland Woods schools and their sites, tidewaters in the city's sphere of influence which are not yet within the city's boundaries, and the abandoned railroad right-of-way running over Ring Mountain.

BUILDING CODE — Introduced an ordinance to adopt the 1973 version of the unified building code.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT — Set May 28 as the date of a joint planning commission-city council meeting to review the environmental impact report for the Sequoia Pacific development proposal for downtown Tiburon.

SMOKING — Asked the city staff to draft an ordinance to ban smoking in council chambers during council meetings.

APPEAL — Rejected an appeal of a planning commission decision to grant a variance for a home at 30 Redding Court which would exceed allowable lot coverage by about 7 per cent. Appeal was filed by neighbors Lloyd Tokerud, Edward B. Howell and John Sweeney against a decision in the case of a home to be built by Edward Graves.

CLOSED SESSION — Went behind closed doors to discuss possible appointments to city boards and commissions.

BOY, WHAT A SCOUT!

Mary Wright, a 17-year-old high school senior from Newton, Mass., is the first girl elected president of the 500,000-member Explorer Scout division of the Boy Scouts of America. Though she says she's "no libber" Mary felt sure she wouldn't have been elected last week in Washington had it not been for the feminist movement. Her campaign slogan, "Wright On," helped her defeat Gary Griffiths of Salt Lake City, Utah. (UPI Telephoto)

"How can I mail a birthday present so it gets there in time for the birthday?"

Postmaster Hugh Cassidy, San Rafael, California 94901

Your postal people deliver your packages everywhere in America. All of us at the Post Office hear lots of questions about the best way to send packages. Here's some advice that I've found helpful to people.

Regular Parcel Post.

When the birthday is a comfortable week or two away, send your present by regular Parcel Post. Parcel Post is a great buy when you've planned ahead for the birthday. Out-of-town rates start at 72¢ for up to 2 pounds.

Priority Mail.

If the birthday is really coming up fast—in 2 or 3 days—send your present Priority Mail. It's more expensive (prices start at $1.25) because it goes by air. But at this point, a happy face may be more important than the money.

Special Delivery.

When the birthday is so close you've just about given up all hope, add Special Delivery to your Priority Mail.

Prices start at 60¢. But Special Delivery, except in most rural areas, gets your present delivered within a few hours after it arrives at its destination Post Office. Special Delivery even gets your present delivered after hours, and on Sundays and holidays. And birthdays.

Wrapping your package.

Before you mail a package, make sure its contents are cushioned and protected inside. To prevent breakage, make sure nothing is loose.

Your package should be securely wrapped and sealed, using heavy paper and twine. Not just ordinary string.

And just to be sure, enclose an address and return address inside the package too. That way, in case anything should happen to the outer wrapping, we'll still be able to get your package where it's going.

We're here to help you get it there.

When you have a question about the best way to mail anything—ask the people at your Post Office. The price you pay depends on what it costs us to give you the service you want.

The only reason we have different services is so you can choose the service that's best for you.

And we're glad to help.

U.S. MAIL

Mean April Weather Is Continuing

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Tornadoes and severe thunderstorms hit the South again yesterday, killing a woman in Georgia and causing damage there and in eastern Tennessee and South Carolina.

The National Weather Service ordered pre-dawn tornado watches today in northern Florida and southeastern Georgia.

President Nixon plans to fly to Xenia, Ohio, today to tour the tornado-ravaged community and observe federal recovery efforts, the White House said.

White House Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon's helicopter would land in Xenia so the President could get a first-hand view of the destruction caused by the tornados that struck last week.

A spring storm hit New England, prompting heavy snow warnings for today. Forecasters predicted 6 to 10 inches of snow may accumulate in south central New York.

Wet snow and rain were expected to produce hazardous driving conditions in portions of Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

TORNADO VICTIM — A funeral procession bearing one of the victims of last week's devastating tornado moves through the streets of Xenia, Ohio. National Guard spokesmen said yesterday that at least 10 persons remain unaccounted for since the April 3 disaster.

(UPI Telephoto)

Strong winds piled up waters on the extreme southwest shores of Lake Erie during the night. Lake flooding was reported one half mile inland at one point, the National Weather Service said.

One of the new twisters destroyed a mobile home at Banconton, in southern Georgia yesterday, killing a woman and injuring three members of her family. Several tornadoes touched down in northern Georgia, where 16 died in last week's onslaught. No new fatalities were reported. More than 320 persons died in tornadoes Wednesday and Thursday.

April continued to be the cruelest month.

A surprise storm dumped seven inches of snow on Indiana covering some areas where tornadoes killed upwards of 40 last week. Roads were slick and hazardous, according to the State Police.

Nursery Schoolers Have A Seder

By JOAN LISETOR

"Usually we have snacks, but today we are having something different — a seder," Zipora Anker told the 34 nursery school students at the Marin Jewish Community Center.

A seder is the traditional meal served on the eve of Passover, the Jewish spring festival commemorating the exodus from Egypt of the Jews during the time of the Pharoahs. Passover began at sundown Saturday and continues through Friday.

Seating themselves at the table the 3, 4 and 5-year-olds proceeded to dig into a bowl of matzo ball soup. The table, set by the children, was decorated with baskets of paper flowers they had made.

A seder plate was passed, and Miss Anker, the teacher, explained the significance of the foods on the plate — a lamb bone "to thank God for letting the Jews out of Egypt," parsley "because it is spring time," bitter herbs "because of the hard time the Jews had in Egypt. Also on the tray was a roasted egg, to recall the offerings of the past, and matzos, the unleavened bread, eaten during the seven days of Passover. Unleavened bread is eaten in memory of the exodus, when the people had no time to wait for the bread to rise. The sixth item on the tray was charosis, made of chopped apples, nuts and honey, which represents the mortar used in building pyramids while the Jews were the slaves of the pharaohs.

The children asked the traditional questions, beginning with, "Why is this night different from all other nights?"

When the children became a bit impatient as the turkey course was being served Miss Anker reminded them, "Usually we sit down and eat in a hurry. On Passover we take time to ask questions and tell a story."

The main course completed, the toddlers were delighted to receive their dessert of macaroons, sweet cookies made without flour, a part of their heritage they could understand.

NANCY GOLDSTEIN passes the charosis at the seder. Made of chopped apples, nuts and honey, charosis is served at the seder to represent the mortar used by the Jews, when they were slaves in Egypt, to build pyramids for the pharaohs.

ROBBIE KROW asks the traditional Passover seder question, "Why is this night different from all other nights?" with help of her nursery school teacher Zipora Anker. Munching on a matzo, the unleavened bread eaten by Jews during the seven days of Passover, is Jonathan Lefferts (left). The seder was held at the Marin Jewish Community Center Nursery School. Plight Of The Farm Worker Explained In YWCA Series

By KAREN PETERSON

The red flag of the Huelga, with the black Aztec eagle signifying hope, has begun to wave in the cities where the United Farmworkers of America hope to rally the support of the community to end "the last remnant of slavery" and "secure basic human rights," said An McDowell of the UFWA last night at the Young Women's Christian Association.

Contracts won three years ago by the farmworkers have run out, and some "agri-business" growers have refused to renegotiate, said Miss McDowell at the Woman's Center Knowledge is Power program on the history of the farmworkers movement. Because of this, the farmworkers are asking consumers to boycott, as they did successfully in the past, grapes, lettuce and wine from Modesto, she said.

The grape boycott is beginning again, she said, because contracts have dropped from covering 60,000 workers to 6,-000. "We have lost contracts but we have not lost the people," she said of consumer and farmworker unity that has made many growers "respond to economic pressure."

SHE ALSO believes the AFL-CIO endorsement of the boycott will help with contract renewals for the farmworkers victimized by unsanitary working and living conditions, health hazards and the exclusion from minimum wage laws, unemployment insurance and other federal labor laws.

Because the AFL-CIO endorsement excludes the secondary boycott, the boycott will no longer be directed at a whole store, just the product, she said.

The nonviolent 12-year struggle for the rights of the farmworker has seen a number of successes including medical clinics, soon-to-be built retirement and child care centers in Delano and unification of the farmworkers who were historically "pitted against one another" for the grower's benefit, she said.

"The farmworkers know the system better than all of us because they've been affected by it so long," said Miss McDowell. "They know that the only way to win is by working together."

Herinvolvement with the improvement began when she was working in one of the Imperial Valley clinics and witnessed the effects of this country's "third most dangerous profession."

The average life span of the farmworker is 49, she said, and the mortality rate is 260 per cent higher and the infant mortality rate is 125 per cent higher than the national rate.

Because the farmworkers are not included in federal labor laws, 50,000 children work the eight to ten-hour day in the fields and few, because of their migratory lives, get even the rudiments of a good education, she said.

YET, CHILD labor is forced on the farmworker because the family needs that extra money for food and shelter during the picking season, she added. The proposed new minimum wage law, which may include farmworkers, will in effect foster child labor because children between 12 and 18 are not included in the bill and will thus be considered "cheap labor" by the growers, she said.

One of the most critical problems facing the farmworker is the continued use of pesticides which last year included the use of a form of nerve gas, said Miss McDowell. The pesticide, Monitor 4, used last year was found in the blood of those farmworkers tested, and not until after months of pressure, did the government ban its use, she added.

The 1,500 cases of pesticide poisoning reported from the last picking season is 15 per cent higher than the previous year and predictions are that it will be 25 per cent higher next year because the insects are gradually becoming immune.

Miss McDowell said one of the main problems of unionizing is the "tremendous power" of the opposition which does not mean one individual grower but more often a large corporation.

The grower in reality is agri-

Tips Given For Keeping Warm In Bed

NEW YORK (UPI) — You turn down the thermostat to 64 or lower at night to conserve fuel. So — how do you keep warm in bed?

Sally Ames, sleep consultant to a bedding maker in Chicago, suggests the following:

Be sure that caulking is in good repair around windows and doors. Proper caulking keeps cold drafts out and heat in.

Close the fireplace damper when the fireplace is not in use. A lot of hot air escapes through an open damper.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

This Time She Wants Nothing To Do With Father Of Child

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

You sided with the guy who wanted to get back with his pregnant girl friend, marry her and 'be a good husband and father.'' He sounded sincere, but.

Here's my story.

I met Sam at a time when everything seemed wrong with my life. He was handsome and forceful and I was the perfect victim — a sensitive little nobody so grateful for notice that I took his beatings and abuse. Between times, he was full of charm. But he cheated on me, took my money, bossed me, put me through hell.

I finally quit school and lost interest in everything. Then I really flipped and took to the street scene, getting into drugs, robbing, ripping off, doing anything to make money for dope for Sam and me.

I wound up in jail several times and went into a couple of drug programs, but Sam always showed up and I'd weakly go back to him.

Then I got pregnant and made up my mind I was going straight. I'm in a rehabilitation program and am going to school again, learning a career. My family is backing me. The baby will have a good home. This time I'll make it —I know I will!

But Sam is hounding me. He says he has a right to his kid and I can't keep him away. He's making all kinds of threats. In the next breath he swears he'll go straight and do anything I want if I only come back to him.

Always before, I've caved in — only to have him treat me worse than ever. But this time, I'm strong.

Does Sam have any legal rights to his baby? He gets violent sometimes and I'm afraid of what he might do. — N.P.H.

DEAR N.:

Sam has no legal rights to a baby he can't legally prove is his. And you have a right to protection from a man who might cause you or the baby harm. Contact your district attorney. — HELEN

DEAR N.:

Since Sam probably has a police record (right?), an official warning — that if he doesn't stop threatening you he'll be in more trouble with the law — may scare him away from your door. Let's hope so! — SUE

RAP:

I just discovered that my mother was three months pregnant when she married Dad. She doesn't know I know. She was just 17 when I was born.

Would this explain why she seems to dislike me? I'm blamed for everything and I have to do all the housework, cook, etc., plus baby-sit when Mom and Dad work. I even wash and iron for the entire family of six. My sisters and brother are 12, 11, and 8 and I'm 14. They aren't asked to do any work, but they get most of the love and I get most of the yelling. Mom has even said she doesn't love me.

I try to do my best, but I guess I was not wanted then, and I'm — NOT WANTED NOW

NWN:

Your mother may subconsciously be taking out on you the guilt and misery she felt when she first discovered she was ''caught.''

Try talking to her openly about your premature arrival. Maybe it will shake her into realizing a child shouldn't be blamed for her parents' actions. — SUE

DEAR N.:

Whether your mother resents you for a too-early adulthood or not, talking out your problems may show her how unfair it is to push all the responsibity on the oldest child in the family. Tell her how unloved you feel. So often parents don't really know what hurts unless they're told. — HELEN

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902., if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Casually Yours!

DESIGN FOR PEOPLE

Use That Space Beneath The Stairs

By EMILY MALINO
Distributed by United Feature Syndicate

No matter how our houses shrink, there's always another obscure spot for a closet or a work-and-shelf space or a sewing or hobby center. Look around; there's bound to be an alcove or a wall somewhere that can be converted to full-time usefulness.

Instant examples spring to mind: that wall space between the bedroom and closet door, for instance, or the space over the bathroom door. Or the space under the stairs.

Of course, you may live in a house without stairs, but then, you may also be like me and live in a two-story house. In my house, there is a handy closet under the stair, but I've lived in other houses where the space was left absolutely gloriously free, ready to be adapted to your every whim or any need.

UNDER-STAIR space can be a cozy minisitting room, with a beanbag cluster for tiny tots or an elegant pine settee for a waiting visitor. I once saw a fantastic file-cabinet arrangement under a stair, where one-two-three-four and five-drawer files were arranged in ascending order under the stair as it rose.

One of the best under-stair arrangements I've seen is the under-stair study. Shelves are arranged to fit the triangular space and hold books and plants, as well as the accessories that the occupant needs to pursue a free-lance job.

The stairwell itself is an open design; the treads are fastened to the sidewall and the posts of the stair so there are no vertical risers to support them. This means that sunlight entering the big window on the landing at the left not only creates a good growing establishment for the plants alongside it; the sun also penetrates the stairwell to stimulate plants beneath it, on their shelves.

BUT EVEN if your stairwell is in a dark, interior space, which is often where stairs are placed, you can grow shade-loving plants and treat them to a daily dose of fluorescent light from a nearby lamp that also does double duty as a desk lamp.

The shelves in my stairwell study are hung on brackets and are arranged to fit the shape of the stair, and at the widest point there is a sturdy work shelf, extending 18 inches into space, and supported with enough brackets to hold up a typewriter.

A convenient chair, with arms high enough to clear the shelf, makes a good place to work or read and can be neatly stored under the work shelf.

Since any space under stairs tends to look cluttered and messy, I made the stair itself the dominant visual factor by painting it a bright color and keeping the shelves and shelf-wall white. Even a little necessary disorder on the shelves doesn't become a distraction from the overall space.

For those of you with storage needs, cheer up. If you can find the space, use it. There's no limit to its potential.

Management Jobs For Women Sought

By FREDERICK H. GUIDRY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BOSTON — There are some people who do not like the prospect of women moving up to top management jobs.

They say they don't like what the work will do to the women (destroy their femininity) or what the women will do to the work (fail at it, perhaps bringing capable men down with them).

There are others who think it doesn't really matter whether top management is open to women, because women don't want those jobs anyway, no matter what a few of the most outspoken of them say and no matter what the new government upward-mobility rulings provide.

But there also are those who not only favor the idea of women managers but are actively working to ensure their success.

AMONG THIS still small but increasingly influential group are two Boston-based educators whose enthusiastic efforts have flowered into the first graduate program in management at a women's college.

The Simmons College program developed by Dr. Margaret Hennig and Dr. Anne Jardim —already well known to major firms using their consulting services — quickly gave signs of being a wave of the future. Even before the program could be formally launched, it attracted over 600 inquiries.

Since the plan is to begin with one section of 60 students, it is obvious that many applicants will have to be left out of the pioneering class. However, Simmons is pleased to have such a wide choice, since organizers of the program have definite ideas about the kind of diversity they want among students. The main types will be:

1. Women who normally would be moving into a job direct from undergraduate school, with the expectation of getting on-job training in functional management skills.

2. Women already in industry who have five to 10 years' experience as specialists and are prime candidates for management positions, possibly under the government's "affirmative action" program.

"The more experienced women will bring reality to bear on the course content and on class discussion . . . The less experienced students in turn will help the professional women adjust to academic life and . . . will help them question old assumptions about themselves and about the organizations in which they work.

"The professional women, in short, will be able to tell the younger students how things are; the younger students will tend to question why that should be," states a descriptive release from the school.

ALTHOUGH THE program is open to men, its planners concede it is designed specifically for women. Of the 13 courses to be offered, five are behavioral in content and reflect a predominant concern with helping women prepare for management work in a heavily male environment. The remaining courses, termed "functional," are the type that would be found in any business graduate school.

The program will take one year to complete —a full academic year plus a summer.

"If it took two years," noted one of the planners, "hardly any working women would be allowed to come."

The Simmons graduate program aims to show that the chances of women succeeding in their new high-level posts can be greatly improved by the right kind of academic preparation.

Professors Jardim and Hennig point out that although women have been getting advanced business degrees at mostly male schools, many women miss about 25 per cent of the experience by being effectively shut out of class discussions and study groups. For example, if a woman makes a statement in class, it is not unusual for the next male speaker to show that he had not even listened to what she said.

As for counting on the professor (male) to right such rough-shod discussion, the Simmons team observed, "If he makes an effort on her behalf, this brings pressure on himself as well as the girl."

PART OF any business-school experience, they maintain, is the behavioral aspects of being there. But whereas a male-dominated school may parallel the actual business world in its emphasis on aggressiveness and risk-taking, it is not adapted to instruct on how to cope with this.

The Simmons program, though knowledgeable about the male business world, is not set up to imitate it. Rather it is consciously organized to teach what the problems of functioning in this world are, and to arm the student with ways to perform well.

Once in top management in greater numbers, women will have a profound influence, the professors believe.

"Cultural and social rules in most organizations preclude men expressing very much emotion very freely," they noted. "Women are going to insist that emotional aspects of life be a part of the work experience.

"Sometimes you hear it said that women should be kept out of the business world because their good qualities might be jeopardized. But if women are all that marvelous, they belong in the business world. They are going to bring into business a more human element that will benefit both men and women."

TO HELP prepare women to move into top management jobs, Dr. Anne Jardin (left) and Dr. Margaret Hennig, both Boston educators, have set up the first graduate program in management for women at Simmons College. Even before it was launched it attracted over 600 inquiries.

moisture to the air. Cold air has less moisture in it than warm air, and a humidifier will make a 65-degree room seem warmer.

Use extra blankets for added warmth. You may want to put newspapers under the sheets and pad to add insulation, keeping cold from coming through the mattress.

A thermal blanket, sandwiched between two sheets will keep you warm as toast. You may want to add a down comfort.

Turn your bed covers and top sheet about 15 minutes before going to bed. The warmth of the room, even at the 65-degree temperature, will warm the sheets.

Wear socks to bed. If you have really cold feet, try down-filled socks, sold in sporting goods stores.

Wear a nightcap to keep the temples of the cranium warm.

Switch to warmer night clothes, such as flannel pajamas. Sweatsuits make great pajamas. They come in gray, white and blue. You can dye the white a color to match your bedroom's decor.

business which meant, in 1969 figures, 7 per cent of the state's farms were in control of 80 per cent of the land, the biggest holders being oil conglomerates. This control of the state farms that supply nearly 40 per cent of the country's crops also spills over into local courts, she said.

Judges pass injunctions all the time against the farmworkers and the boycott, she said. "This is unconstitutional, not illegal," she added, "The whole constitutionality of this is questionable."

BRINGING THESE facts to light is why the "people in the community are so important," said Miss McDowell. The power of the consumer has meant, locally, a 20 per cent drop in sales of a boycotted wine in a Fairfax supermarket, and a doubling (to $14 million) in advertising this year by the company that produces the wine, she said.

The representatives of the farmworkers hold meetings every Thursday at 7:45 at the Mill Valley Community Church at Throckmorton and Olive streets.

A Good Friday service will be held this Friday at 5 p.m. at Blackie's Meadow in Tiburon. A pilgrimage from Westminister Presbyterian Church in Tiburon to the meadow will begin at 4 p.m. and will include the carrying of a 16-foot cross.

Polish Remover Easy On Hands

New for hand care is a nail polish remover with a nail and cuticle treatment also built in. The maker says that all polish removers contain solvents which are very drying to the nails, the cuticles and skin that surrounds the nails. So, the new formula in addition to solvents contains rosewater for re-moisturizing the skin and glycerin which acts as a humidifier to retain the moisture.

Cat Claims Top Prize In Contest

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Newly bankrolled Mr. Kurt, a giant Siamese cat, returned to the hospital today for his second operation.

There are no villains in this tale. The owner of the cat, Debra Cranford, 18, feels pretty happy about the whole thing.

A court Monday declared her the legal winner of a clothing store contest, in which she had entered Mr. Kurt's name, and the proprietors were perfectly willing to pay the prize.

The store wanted a legal ruling, however, before handing over the $750 first place check.

"We always intended to pay, but we wanted the court to say that the cat's owner was the legal winner —just so in the future the second or third place winner would not be able to file a suit claiming they had won the first place prize," said Jim Mock, assistant store manager.

The cat has an illness similar to gallstone infection in humans. He had an operation earlier this month, was brought to the court yesterday and reentered the animal clinic today for another operation, probably next week.

"I'm happy we got the money," Debbie said. "We'll use it for medical expenses."

Judge Denzil Bevers of Lubbock County Court declared Miss Cranford the legal winner. Mock immediately presented the $750 winner's check.

Attorneys for both sides said they could find no precedent in court records where an animal had been declared legal winner of a contest.

Dirksen's Flower Will Adorn Flag

PEKIN, Ill. (UPI) — The late Sen. Everett M. Dirksen failed to make the marigold the national flower but his hometown has not forgotten his efforts.

The marigold will form the center of the new flag which the city of Pekin, Ill. will adopt this week.

Earth's Gravity Getting Weaker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first indirect evidence was reported yesterday supporting the theory that the strength of gravity on earth and throughout the universe is very slowly weakening.

Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern, an astronomer at the U.S. Naval Observatory, measured the orbital speed of the moon with the precision of an atomic clock to determine that the force of gravity apparently is decreasing at the rate of one part in 10 billion per year.

This means, he said in an interview, that a 150-pound man would lose 7 millionths of a gram of weight a year. A gram is roughly the weight of a paper clip.

Van Flandern presented his findings at the opening session of a week-long meeting of the American Geophysical Union. He said his work was based on a theory proposed two years ago by Cambridge University astronomer Fred Hoyle.

The basis for the work is the assumption that if gravity is weakening, the orbits of planets about the sun, or the moon about the earth, would slowly expand and the time for each orbit would gradually increase. The orbital time of the moon was easiest to measure, but it is also known that the friction of tidal forces between the earth and moon is slowing the moon's orbit.

Hoyle suggested that if the role played by tidal forces were removed from the calculations, the role of a decrease of gravity could be measured. Van Flandern, using the separate calculations of two other scientists, subtracted the tidal factor and found that what presumably is weakening of gravity is allowing the moon to move away from the earth about 4 centimeters a year— about 1½ inches —to increase its orbital period seven-tenths of a second a year.

"This is the first numerical result which appears to have as its most probable explanation that gravity is decreasing," he said.

Up to about 40 years ago, it was assumed by scientists that the force of gravity remained constant. The first suggestion that it might be decreasing was made in the 1930s. But there is as yet no direct way to measure changes in the force of gravity, and Van Flandern said his work was the first indirect evidence suggesting gravity is decreasing.

Another possible cause for a lengthening of orbital period would be that the sun is losing mass at a greater rate than is now believed. But he said astrophysicists do not believe this is the case.

"So as nearly as we can tell, the other possibilities seem to be excluded," Van Flandern said.

If the rate of gravity weakening were constant throughout the history of the solar system, he said, it would mean that an object that existed 4.5 billion years ago would be twice as heavy as it is today.

A weakening of gravity also would have major implications for the earth and moon. It would mean, for example, that the earth is expanding at the rate of less than one centimeter per century. That, he said, could explain why the continents of earth seem to be slowly drifting apart.

A constant rate of the decline in the force of gravity also compounds a problem for scientists trying to determine the history of the moon in relation to earth. Constant deceleration of the moon's orbital speed by tidal forces alone would mean that the moon could not have been a satellite more than 1.5 billion years and the weakening of gravity on top of that would mean the moon must not have been an earth satellite longer than 1 billion years.

But he said if the strength of gravity is decreasing, a long-time puzzle about earth's rotation would be cleared up. The rotation of earth apparently has been slowing at only half the rate predicted by tidal friction with the moon. But the theory that gravity is weakening would account for this discrepancy because it would imply that the astronomical time scale used for measurements must also be revised.

More Students Job Funds Set

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Marin County will receive $4,788 to expand its program providing jobs to high school students from low income families, the Department of Labor announced today.

The grant will allow the county's Neighborhood Youth Corps to provide after-school jobs for about 14 students from high schools throughout the county, according to Leland R. Rosevear, assistant director of the youth corps.

Under the federally funded program, the county currently provides jobs for 56 students who work about 10 hours per week, Rosevear said.

Shortage Due Of Jelly Beans

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jelly beans, a traditional Easter candy, will be in short supply this year, according to R.E. Ferguson of the F.W. Woolworth Co.

He said yesterday that the scarcity is due to difficulties manufacturers are having with the rise in the cost of sugar, syrup flavoring and packaging of the candy.

Fischer May Play

PARIS (UPI) — World chess champion Bobby Fischer is going to the French Riviera to play in the 21st Chess Olympiad June 6-20. But the temperamental American will only make his moves in a building separate from all the other competitors.

MARIN LODGE OPENS

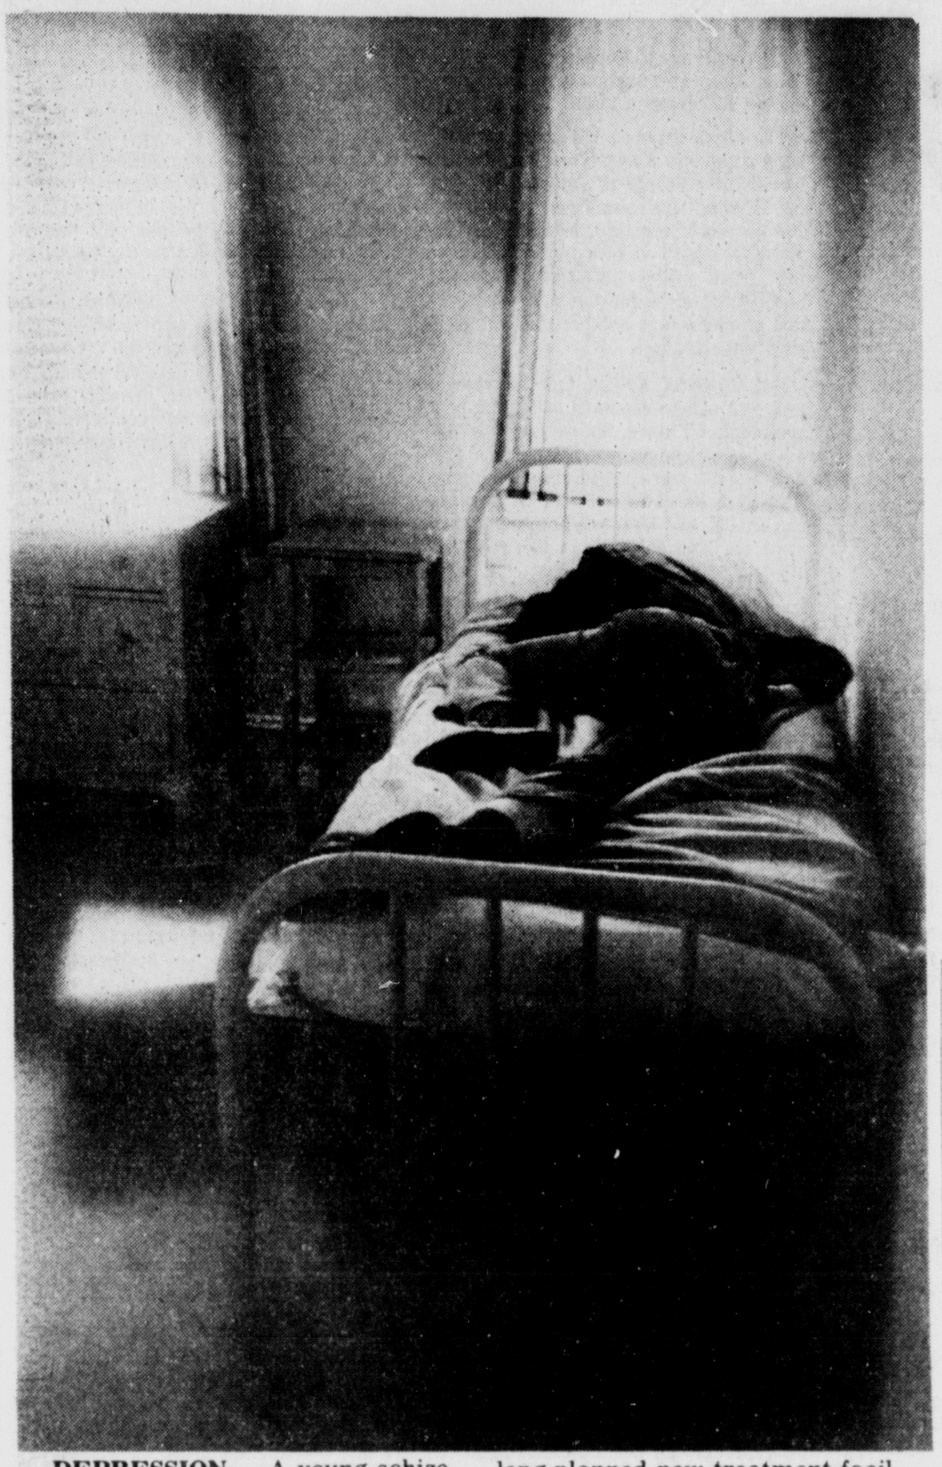
Mental Health Dream Come True

By MARY LEYDECKER

Outside, it was a rather dismal, gray, drippy day, but inside the big house on Mission Street in San Rafael, things seemed pretty cheerful, at least at first.

There was the normal clutter associated with moving into a new house, but staff members, dressed in casual clothes, went about various chores or sat and chatted with the young residents of the house.

It took a while for it to sink in that the occupants of the new Marin Lodge are all diagnosed schizophrenics.



DEPRESSION — A young schizophrenic, suffering from a wave of depression, escapes into sleep in his room at Marin Lodge, the long-planned new treatment facility for such mental patients which has opened in San Rafael.

(Photo by Jim Kean

Further, according to the director of the facility that opened two weeks ago, the patients have without exception "been through the system." By this remark, psychologist Murray Levine meant that the patients, young adults in their 20s, already have lengthy records of commitments to mental institutions, halfway houses and periods of aimless wanderings.

So far, there have been few glimmers of hope for the young people to escape this cycle.

But Marin Lodge is the fruition of a dream of an unusual, perhaps unique, group of Marin residents. It started a couple of years ago — six families who banded together, drawn close by the hopeless situation in which they found themselves.

They were the parents of young people like the new residents of Marin Lodge and they knew the heartsick frustration of having children who were schizophrenics.

For more than two years, the Marin Parents for Mental Recovery, now grown to some 40 families, worked to set up a facility that would be something different from a state hospital or a halfway house — something that would offer treatment in a controlled setting for their children.

Without official blessing and with only modest help from governmental agencies, the group finally has put together such a facility.

The need for it is dramatized, according to Murray, by the fact that there is already a waiting list for Marin Lodge, which is limited to 12 live-in patients and six day-care ones.

Although only one of the first patients is a child of the sponsoring group, Marin Parents for Mental Recovery still express delight at the opening. "We finally can see something being done," one of the mothers said.

Some, like one young man who had dressed up in hopes of having his picture taken, seem to be "functioning pretty well," as Dr. Levin describes it.

Others are not.

Two are asleep in their new bedrooms, huddled on old hospital beds donated by Presbyterian Hospital in San Francisco. Fully clothed, with their suitcases on the floor beside their beds, they seem very forlorn.

Dr. Levine explained that these "very depressed" people are included in work activities around the house but are allowed periods to "escape" by sleeping if they wish.

As Dr. Levine talked, two young women returned from a shopping trip with a counselor (such errands are turned into outings for patients in an effort to keep them occupied, and also to allow them to deal with the "real" outside world.) The young women had bought a can of popcorn "for the house."

They began to giggle, apparently over nothing. Soon the giggles, which at first seemed normally girlish, became uncontrollable, no longer normal, and somewhat disturbing.

Another young woman, who earlier had said "I need to talk to someone right now" and was being helped through acute depression and waves of hallucination by a staff member, decided she wanted to leave.

Levine and another staff member stood between her and the unlocked front door, and the woman was persuaded to come back into the house and lie down on a couch, a staff nurse rubbing her back.

Levine explained that such ups and downs are typical of schizophrenics — some days they function well and other days, do not.

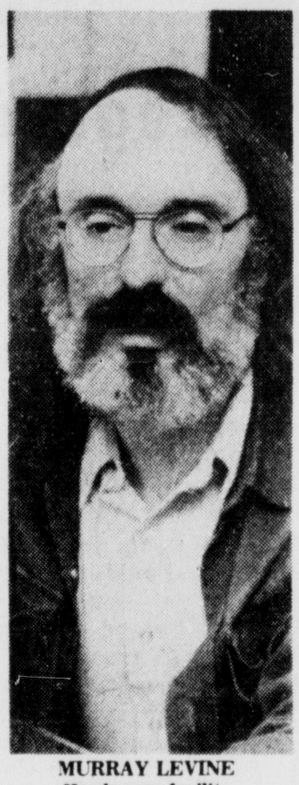
The program at Marin Lodge aimed at eventually getting such persons into a normal, productive life, leans heavily on work therapy.

Each day, Levine said, small crews of patients and counselors will be formed, some to perform necessary shopping, cooking and cleaning chores in the house, and others to work outside.

The outside work will include the raising of vegetables to be used in the house "to cut costs," Levine said, as soon as a donor or lender of land in Marin can be found. Needed is a minimum of 3.5 acres.

The house has been offered use of a site in Sonoma County, but Levine would prefer something closer that won't take so long to travel to.

In such useful group work, Levine believes, the staff can get to know and counsel the patients much more effectively than in formal interview sessions. (Many of the patients, all of whom are being supported by state funds as disabled indigents, also are seen regularly by therapists outside the house.)



MURRAY LEVINE
Heads new facility

"I do not like drugs," Levine said firmly, adding he had "never seen anyone get better on drugs," either the legal or illegal ones. He does not, however, blame the predicament of his patients primarily on drugs, and he also recognizes the need sometimes for tranquilizers for schizophrenic patients "to get them to a point where we can talk to them."

The tranquilizers can be withdrawn, he said, when a "strong support system" of staff members at the house can take effect.

Although the problems of settling into a program with new patients and in a new facility not yet fully completed seemed large, Levine said the patients are "beginning to notice this is not like the other places" they have been.

Marin Lodge is a "treatment center, not a halfway house," he emphasized, but the atmosphere is different from a large institution.

Among the projects he has in mind are to have patients and staff construct built-in furniture for the living room and to complete draperies and other furnishings. (Marin Lodge has been furnished by donations garnered by the parents' group.)

All of the programs are intended to bring patients to the point where they can go into "satellite" houses or to halfway facilities, and finally, into the world.

Whether or not Marin Lodge will have a high rate of success with people for whom all else has failed, only time can tell. "But it's so wonderful finally to have something started," a mother said.

Planning, Zoning Fee Hike Is Asked In Corte Madera

An increase in town zoning and planning fees, many unchanged for 15 years, was recommended last night by the Corte Madera Planning Commission.

William G. McBride, town zoning administrator, said the higher fees would be in line with those charged in other communities, according to a survey he has made.

Residential reports, required before property is sold, would increase from $25 to $40, as an example, he said. Fees for variances would be quadrupled from $15 to $60, and zoning change fees would increase from $75 to $300, he said.

McBride said other parts of the state, especially in Southern California, charge as much as $1,000 for zoning changes.

The new fee schedule will be sent to the town council for approval.

The Corte Madera Planning Commission also:

CENTER — Continued until May 13 a hearing on the environmental impact report on expansion of the Corte Madera Shopping Center.

SCHOOL — Approved expansion plans for Marin Montessori School, 5200 Paradise Drive, to increase its capacity from 50 to 80 students.

PARK — Approved plans for the Skunk Hollow Mini Park at 61 El Camino Drive.

CLEMENTE — Received a complaint from Patricia Rodriguez of height of new building at 13 San Clemente Drive and noted that the Corte Madera Design Review Board is studying complaints from citizens in the area.

SMOKE — Decided that smoking will be allowed at commission meetings unless there is an objection from someone in the audience.

PRESIDIO — Set a public hearing May 13 to consider revoking permit for planned unit development for Madera del Presidio.

TRANSIT — Set May 13 for review of local transit development program prepared by the county planning department.

COUNCIL — Recommended that the town council extend the town's building moratorium to September following its expiration in May.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to April 20 at 9 a.m. in town hall to continue public hearings on the proposed general plan.

Consultants Chosen For Redevelopment

Rockrise, Odermatt, Mountjoy and Amis, a San Francisco consulting firm, was chosen by the San Rafael City Council last night to draft the city's redevelopment master plan.

Councilmen announced the decision as they emerged from a two-hour closed session in city hall. Three other firms had applied for the job.

The council also announced selection of Kaiser-Marsten Associates to prepare an economic analysis of the redevelopment project. Two economic consultants have applied for the job.

The two firms selected last night will work together and simultaneously in drafting the documents, according to City Mgr. William J. Bielser.

The firms were chosen subject to "satisfactory negotiation of a contract, fees, and scope of work," he reported.

He said city staff will negotiate terms of contracts with the firms this week.

The city council next meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in city hall to discuss open space selection procedures with the city's open space advisory committee. That meeting will be followed at 8 p.m. by a session with the city planning commission, called to review commission revisions of the city's emerging general plan.

Cotati Girl Reports Sex Attack

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — A 14-year-old Cotati girl has reported to the sheriff's office that she was raped last week.

The girl told officers she was walking along Railroad Avenue at about 7:30 p.m. Thursday when a man began following her in a 1961-65 dark green Ford Falcon.

The man stopped, she reported, and forced her into the back seat, where she was beaten and raped. He then let her go and drove away.

A sheriff's department spokesman said she described the rapist as 20 to 25 years old, six feet four inches tall, weighing about 220 pounds and having a dark complexion and black hair.

The girl told officers she delayed reporting the incident because of fright. She said she bit the man's lower lip.

College Board Sets Smoking Ban Debate

Marin Community College District trustees will reconsider a recently passed policy prohibiting smoking at board meetings when they meet tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in room 160 of the College of Marin office center.

Trustees will also discuss the organization of the college district.

Arrest In Suspicion Of Asault

A 25-year-old Larkspur man was arrested on suspicion of rape yesterday following the assault Sunday of a 13-year-old San Anselmo girl on a dirt road in Fairfax.

Kirk Vern Cammack of 679 Magnolia Avenue was booked into Marin County Jail and released after posting $1,500 bail to appear tomorrow in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported today that the girl was attending a barbecue in San Anselmo Sunday evening when a man approached her, pushed her into a pickup truck, and drove to a dirt road in Fairfax. She was raped after being forced to perform an act of sex perversion, police said.

The man then drove her back to San Anselmo, according to police.

San Anselmo police said Cammack is an acquaintance of the girl's mother, and turned himself in yesterday.

'No Way' Legislators Will Be Responsible

"There is no way," the man said, that legislation to require the California Legislature to submit a balanced budget can pass.

The man, in this case, is Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., D-San Francisco. He is chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, and in that role he exercises a great deal of power. So when Willie Brown says "there is no way" a bill can pass, the word is not to be dismissed lightly.

WHAT ARE THESE measures which Brown characterized as "phony" and "only for campaign purposes"?

They are a proposed state constitutional amendment and accompanying bill introduced last week in the Assembly by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, and in the Senate by Sen. John Stull, R-Encinitas, with the endorsement of Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Here is what they would do:

REQUIRE the Legislature to submit a balanced budget to the governor. If the budget included costs beyond those available from existing sources, it would have to be accompanied by a bill for new taxes to raise the additional revenue.

Forbid either house of the legislature to approve a bill calling for expenditure of $1 million or more unless it contained either a new tax to pay for it, a corresponding reduction in budgeted items, or a statement showing it could be financed from existing revenues.

Require every expenditure bill to contain a revenue synopsis for ensuing years by the legislative analyst — a safeguard against programs that have minimal cost impact in their first year but grow rapidly in succeeding years.

Require that any bill needing a tax increase so state in boldface type.

THESE REQUIREMENTS would force the legislature to shoulder some responsibility for control of state spending, instead of leaving it all to the governor, who under the state constitution cannot approve an unbalanced budget.

In general, they follow restraints the United States Congress recently placed on itself in an attempt to get some control over the federal budget — but they go farther.

Certainly they are in the interests of the state and its taxpayers.

But "there is no way," says Willie Brown, that the measures can pass the legislature.

IF WE HEAR Willie Brown correctly, he is saying that the legislators will not pass the bills because the authors are two Republicans, of whom one — Assemblyman Bagley — is a candidate for state controller; therefore, according to Brown, they are "phony" and "only for campaign purposes."

But if we hear him correctly, Willie Brown is also saying — or implying — that the majority of the legislators have no intention of shouldering any responsibility for the state's fiscal health. They prefer to pass whatever bills they please, leaving it up to the governor to try to keep the budget in line.

Of course, none of those spending bills are "phony" or "only for campaign purposes."

No way!

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Some Confusing Aspects Of Hitch's Trip To Asia

By EARL G. WATERS

A recent five-week tour of the Orient by U.C. President Charles J. Hitch raises some questions. Hitch's absence came to light when Vice President Chester McCorkle was referred to in connection with statements to the press as "acting president."

University officials, queried as to Hitch's absence, gave a vague response to the effect that Hitch was in Asia for the purpose of "improving relationships with Southeast Asia at the request of President Nixon."

However, an inquiry directed to Hitch upon his return evoked the fact that his trip was not at the request of Nixon and had no connection with any federal mission.

"FOR SOME YEARS," Hitch said, "I have been a board member of the Asia Foundation, a San Francisco-based, educationally oriented organization which seeks to foster cultural exchange between Asians and Americans. The foundation operates several centers throughout Asia and, as a board member, I was asked by its officers to visit the centers, consult consult with and advise their staff people, and to facilitate cooperation between them, the local higher education community, and the ministries of education."

The first question which arises is whether the trip could be considered a proper function of the U.C. president.

Hitch said of the trip, "I would also, inescapably, be a representative of the University of California."

That of course raised the question of whether the trip was made at taxpayers expense.

"My travel and other expenses were paid for by the sponsoring foundations," Hitch responded. But Hitch's $55,000 annual salary continued while he was away, though Hitch conceded that some portions of his time on the trip were not official university business. "Thus," he said, "parts of my trip, those parts which were purely personal, will be charged to my accrued vacation time. The rest will not."

THAT MAKES the whole thing somewhat confusing. If the trip was essential to the administration of the university it would be a proper expenditure of funds to finance it.

If the trip was not necessary to the university, why should Hitch not been put on leave, foregoing not only the expenses but his salary as well?

"A high point was my meeting with the prime minister of Pakistan, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, a graduate of our Berkeley campus," said Hitch. "It was a special pleasure to be able to accept his kind offer of hospitality. Throughout my travels I was delighted to find the University of California both well known and held in high regard. I think the trip did much good for the university and the Asia Foundation and, I hope, for the many persons and institutions I saw."

Unfortunately, Hitch was gone during a period when various lawmakers and others were taking pot shots at UC and scrutinizing its budget.

As to that, Hitch said: "The University of California administratively is a far cry from a one-man show. We have taken pains to hire and retain the best people we can, and my staff, headed by Vice President McCorkle, was and is splendidly capable of operating the university without me for five weeks." To that one legislator quipped, "Maybe, he'd like to try for 52."

One of the biggest beefs Spiro Agnew has against Nixon is that he's absolutely ruined the market for vice presidential papers.

Creep Of Inflation Escalating To Gallop

Your editorial in the April issue (Our Penny Soon Won't Be Worth A Red Cent) is excellent.

So many people overlook the obvious as it pertains to our monetary policy. The reason the Federal Reserve System needs so many experts to "manage" our money is that the politicians continue to spend more than is available. To make up for the difference created by government give-away programs, more money is printed. When money is printed without intrinsic backing or an increased productivity, the additional money only makes every present dollar worth that much less. Inflation is the result. It is that simple.

Some monetary experts, who are still in touch with the reality of the situation, contend that if the government continues to inflate the currency we will not have creeping or crawling inflation but rather it will gallop faster than you can push your wheelbarrow to the market!

Write your congressman and senators and demand a balanced federal budget and a systematic retiring of the nation debt.

Over-Reaction Brings Tough Leash Laws

It seems the good burghers of Corte Madera and Larkspur are about to demand that dogs be on a leash at all times. Word control is not enough for these dog lovers. . .Apparently it is important to legislate an occasional dropping on a lawn or fire hydrant, meanwhile spreading beef manure over everything in sight including fruit trees and vegetables. Too bad they can't do something about pigeons and ducks who favor porches, docks, floats, boats and autos.

Well, one thing about it — the police would be able to show some favorable statistics for a change. I can see the new figures reading something like this perhaps: Burglars convicted — None, Robbers convicted — None, Vandals convicted — None, Dogs sacked and owners convicted — 47 — Total crimes solved — 47.

With crime rampant in the homes, in the streets, even in the government itself do we have to pick on the dogs, now, whose only offense is to be man's best friend, whenever and wherever possible? And under the most trying circumstances, we should add.

Seriously, it seems to me that these proposals might stem from an over-reaction to real problems which have got out of control, and which borders on hysteria. Let me tell you that in the area of crime prevention the ordinary canine pet and sometime watchdog is far more effective than police patrols and he should be trained, not restrained.

Same Room, Same Bed —But Different Hospital

You recently published a letter from Evelyn Blitch in which she described her adventuresome stay at Marin General Hospital.

On March 18, shortly after Ms. Blitch left, I was admitted to Marin General Hospital for major surgery.

I was assigned to the same floor as Ms. Blitch — Maternity; to the same room — No. 306W; and, I believe, to the same bed location — Bed No. 2. Here, however, any similarity in our adventures ends.

Among some of Ms. Blitch's descriptions were her travels down corridors filled with blue smoke; I found the corridors (and rooms) exceptionally clean and well ventilated. Ms. Blitch was forced to share a room with a patient who smoked incessantly; I was advised that I could share a room with either a smoker or a non-smoker, whichever I preferred. Ms. Blitch complained about the nightclub atmosphere and excessive noise in and around the room; I failed to discover the nightclub atmosphere and the only noises I heard were those I consider necessary in administering to the needs of patients and new babies.

Ms. Blitch further complained about the rudeness of the nurses; I, on the other hand, have never been inside a hospital where the tenor is one of such courtesy, cheerfulness, and willingness to help. The staff of Marin General impressed me as being a most competent, dedicated, and compassionate group of people. I can, therefore, only come to the conclusion that Ms. Blitch and I were patients at different hospitals. . .

Disagrees With Selection Of News

I have often wondered at the values your staff use in selecting news that is newsworthy. As a volunteer member of a non-profit health organization in the county for seven years, it had repeatedly astonished me that while a PTA president of some obscure community in Marin can receive a write-up complete with pictures, our organization can receive no comparable coverage for a woman in charge of an annual county-wide campaign involving thousands of people.

However, the topper came on March 19, when you printed the picture of the student walkout at the Mill Valley Middle School. You must have been very hard up for news that day, to lower yourselves to such indiscriminate reporting. There was no accompanying article; there was no attempt to check out the facts — just a picture that was slanderous to the community of Mill Valley and to its middle school. Better that your eager reporters and photographers had been down photographing the remaining 90 per cent of the students at the school, instead of playing into the hands of a rude, rebellious and riotous minority. As a teacher at this school, I cannot let such irresponsibility on your part go unremarked.

Husband's Life Saved By Marin General Hospital

This is just a letter to let you and all of Marin County know that if it weren't for Marin General Hospital, my husband would not be alive today.

After his third massive heart attack, I rushed him to Marin General last week. The attendants, nurses, doctors and all on the staff, including the offices, were absolutely fantastic and concerned. I feel I'll always be indebted to Marin General for their superb care given to their patients. I have been in many hospitals, a patient as well as a visitor, but never have I witnessed such perfection as in Marin General Hospital.

Marin County should give all the help needed to support such a necessary and marvelous organization as Marin General. In my estimation, saving lives as is done within this hopsital is worthy of county help and much more.

Weeps Crocodile Tears Over Nixon's Taxes

My heart just bled for President Nixon when I read today's article . . . on his taxes. Mr. Nixon's personal holdings have been wiped out, according to his assistants, however he receives a salary and expense allowance of $250,000 a year and the government maintains the White House and pays many of the "necessities" for him and his family. Now isn't that enough to bring a tear to one's eyes?

The part I liked the best was "Nixon Forced To Borrow." Why, when all he has to do is continue to steal from the people?

France's New President Likely To Play Less Obstructive Role

Perhaps the most important single fact on the world scene right now is that France is looking for a new president and that, whoever he is, he will be the first French president in 16 years who will not be a Gaullist nationalist predetermined for the succession by Gen. Charles De Gaulle himself.

De Gaulle came to power in France in 1958. Georges Pompidou was De Gaulle's chosen successor in 1969.

The years between 1958 and now have been notable in Europe for the consistent blocking by France of any real progress in bringing the countries of Western Europe closer together. In effect, General De Gaulle imposed a 16-year hiatus in the great project of West European unification whose most effective prophet and promoter was another great Frenchman, Jean Monnet.

WE CANNOT KNOW that the rate of progress will be resumed under the next president of France, but we do know that all of the leading candidates are less nationalist, more pro-European, more friendly to the United States (or perhaps one should say less anti-American) than were the true Gaullists in the general's heyday.

And it is not without some importance that the selection of the successor is being made at a moment when two of De Gaulle's proudest prestige investments — the supersonic airliner Concorde and the great French seagoing passenger liner France —have proved to be unaffordable extravagances.

Nationalist Gaullism is recessive in France itself, and even inside the Gaullist movement. Europeanism is more valued. And so, too, is the American connection.

We will not know for another month the identity of the next French president, but we do know that under him there will be less French difficulty about the British position in the European Common Market, and less obstructionism toward shaping new and more modern ties with the United States. Not even the leading Gaullist candidate for the succession, Jacques Chaban Delmas, is a Gaullist-type nationalist. On the contrary, he is regarded as pro-American and pro-European.

AN OUTSIDE POSSIBILITY is that the French people will turn to the left, just as the British did last month, and take as their next president Francois Mitterland, official head of the Socialist party of France. But this need not alarm those who hope for a resumption of progress towards European unity and closer trans-Atlantic ties.

In France, as in Britain today, the non-Communist left is eager to improve relations with America. Mitterland would be likely to look to Washington in order to prove that he is not influenced in a Moscow direction by the fact that his candidacy is endorsed by the local Communists.

Britain's new prime minister, Harold Wilson, is eager to visit Washington as soon as domestic presidential preoccupations in the American capital permit. We can fairly assume that the new French president also will want to offer early evidence of loyalty to the trans-Atlantic relationship.

A PROBABILITY is that when the members of the Common Market settle down to discuss Britain's proposals for reshaping the rules to make them less burdensome for Britain, the French will be less obstructionist, more willing to listen and be helpful.

General De Gaulle kept the British out entirely. Pompidou let them in, but on tough terms. It is doubtful that he would ever have agreed to softer terms. But his successor, being no longer in the true line of succession from the general, will be freer to do so.

Otherwise most of the major world problems seem to be marking time. The Middle East problems await Secretary of State Kissinger's return to work from his first real interlude since he joined Richard Nixon in Washington in 1969. There is no major change in Southeast Asia. Events in Peking still are a mystery locked in an enigma. Moscow is doing nothing spectacular. Everyone can watch to see how far away from the Gaullist era Charles De Gaulle's France will now move.

News Media Shoulder Heavy Task In Government Scandals

WASHINGTON — Beneath the resounding Watergate waves on the surface is an undercurrent that bears an issue charged for Nixon partisans with intense emotion. It is whether the media — the slanted, biased media, these partisans would say —deliverately set out to destory the president and entangle him in the Watergate disclosures.

The president himself aired that view last August with his charge at a press conference of vicious, distorted reporting.

Judging by the Harris Poll measuring the degree of acceptance of a wide variety of institutions, the investigative reporting that brought the Watergate scandals to light raised considerably the standing of the media. But it could be that the greatest test is still to come with the growing likelihood that Richard Nixon will sit in the dock in a trial for impeachment by the Senate.

A STOUT BLOW was struck the other day for the right, indeed for the obligation, of the media to bring the truth to light. Without investigative reporting the whole Watergate scandal would in all probability have been suppresied, Mrs. Katherine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post, told an audience in London.

With an aggressive reporting team that swept the board for all journalism prizes, the Post led the way in exposing the long series of developments resulting in a dozen indictments, pleas of guilty, and with two former Nixon cabinet officers on trial in New York on criminal charges.

Mrs. Graham in her Guildhall speech was responding to charges carried in the Times of London that the Post was conducting "a trial by publicity," "publishing vast quantities of prejudicial matter" against President Nixon. This, said the Times, was "making a fair trial impossible."

IN A LARGER SENSE, of course, Mrs. Graham was replying to critics in this country who make the same charges against the Post, the New York Times, CBS and others of the media. Nixon partisans gave wide circulation to the London Times editorial.

Her speech makes the vital distinction between the different forms of government in Britain and the United States and therefore the differing roles of the respective media. Exposure of the Watergate scandals would not have been possible in Britain because of strict libel laws, the Official Secrets Act, barriers against reporting secret testimony, and other restraints imposed on the media.

But as Mrs. Graham pointed out, the British have a long tradition of official inquiries which have a reasonable chance of getting at wrong-doing. They have the question period in the House of Commons. And a government can be forced to resign at any time on a vote of no confidence in the House.

"You have quick and conclusive ways to expose and deal with the sins and errors of ministers," Mrs. Graham said. "The burden of inquiry does not fall so heavily on the press, and an appeal to the electorate can always be made at once if the outrage or loss of confidence is great enough . . .

"The premium placed on public enlightenment (in the United States) is vast because the guiding and controlling force — the consent of the governed — is not simply a verdict to be rendered every four years in the voting booth. Nor is it the consensus of a powerful and privileged few. It is a force and sentiment continually at play, emerging somehow from the noise and competition of free discourse and debate, protected by the First Amendment and fostered by a free and independent press."

THIS PUTS, as Mrs. Graham suggested, a heavy burden on the media. At a time when all institutions are under attack and suffering serious erosion of confidence, the press and television are also under fire.

Certainly the Nixon loyalists, with every poll showing them to be perhaps 25 per cent of the adult population, are violent on the subject of the media and its responsibility for the plight of the president. Their feelings and those of other Americans who may not be strictly partisans can be exacerbated at the spectacle of Nixon on trial.

Pretrial publicity prejudicing the possibility of a fair hearing in court has been one criticism both in Britain and here at home.

It is a testing time for the system itself, and the media have the sternest obligation to show that they can shed light in dark places without the excesses that generate emotional heat.

Once Let The Rich Come In And Splitsville Will Be Spoiled

The modest community of Splitsville was muddling along in comparative squalor and tranquility until the great housing debate erupted.

An homogeneous community of 23,000, Splitsville was composed of families at, near or below the poverty level, with similar modes of living.

The tempest started when a squad of young upstarts from the planning department recommended the community have a mixture of housing, low, moderate and upper income, for balance.

WITHIN WEEKS the Splitsville Ecumenical Housing Group proposed that Grant's old potato farm become a high-income residential development for the rich.

When the matter came before the town council, the room was filled with shack owners and barn dwellers who protested any intrusion by the wealthy.

"If we let those people in, the town won't be the same," said Cyrus Cork, a lifelong resident. "We'll become a dumping ground for the affluent."

"But the rich have to have someplace to live," said Roger Straight, representing the ecumenical group. "Just think a moment. You may become rich or one of your children may become rich and want to live here."

"Well," Cork replied, "for our own rich, it might be all right, but we don't want the wealthy coming in from all over. We don't want this town to turn into another Beverly Hills, Grosse Point or Ross."

"DO YOU REALIZE that we have two rich businessmen in town who can't live here because they can't find suitable housing? There's nothing priced high enough," Straight said.

Mary Cratcher, a young mother, said: "I know this is a terrible thing to say, but I have to be honest. I don't want my children mingling with those rich brats, with their fancy clothes and lots of spending money. It will have a corrupting influence."

"The next thing you know, all our kids will want swimming pools and small foreign cars," said another mother.

"Then the rich will all get together and start up a country club and spend all their time loafing around playing golf instead of working," said Sam Sloan, a part-time minister and car wash operator.

Mayor Clayton Branch said, "I don't think we should have a concentration of rich in one area, but if we could spread them out in the neighborhoods, it might be all right."

"THOSE RICH PEOPLE like to live together in one area," Sloan replied. "They're not comfortable in with regular folks."

Architect Bill Whitepost said, "I don't think that site is suitable for high cost housing. It doesn't have any sweeping views or rolling hills, and the sunsets out there are just average."

"You let the rich get a foot in the door and they'll take over the whole town," warned Sloan.

In the face of loud protests, the council voted against the project and Straight protested: "I think this entire hearing has been one-sided and unfair. There wasn't even one tycoon here to give us the viewpoint of the rich."

Condominium Delay Effort Fails

Strawberry residents made an unsuccessful effort yesterday to delay an already approved 170-unit condominium project slated for development atop the ridge overlooking the Strawberry Shopping Center.

Their request that an environmental impact report be prepared, among other things, came as the Marin County Planning Commission reviewed design changes proposed by the developers of Seaport Hills. (Another planning commission story, page 1.)

The commission made no decision on the design changes, pending further review by the public works department, but rejected requests from the Strawberry Community Council and others for further study.

The project, proposed by Doric Development, Inc., was approved several years ago before environmental impact reports were required for private projects.

As approved, with little opposition at the time, the plans place the units along the ridge top and down both sides.

Yesterday's proposed changes, which commissioners said they liked, add interior and exterior design modifications to the previously approved "Bon Air Hill" look.

Dennis Klein of the community council urged delay pending further study, while Sandra Dorsaneo, vice president of the council, urged that it move ahead. She said she was not speaking for the council.

Commissioner Jerry Friedman, while sympathizing with the residents, said he could not justify requiring an environmental report on a previously approved project.

Commissioner Gilbert P. Murphy called the request "almost immoral" and urged approval of the design changes. It was delayed until April 22, however, so the public works department can review the changes.

The Marin County Planning Commission also:

POINT REYES — Asked the county counsel's office to investigate whether the county may have planning jurisdiction over the Coast Guard's proposed sewage treatment facility at Point Reyes Station. Commissioner Murphy expressed fear that the proposed facility may mar the entrance to the national seashore.

LUCAS VALLEY — Reviewed long-range improvement plans for Lucas Valley Road between Mount McKinley Road and Big Rock and said they prefer keeping the present alignment as opposed to building a new route.

REZONING — Approved rezoning the Luiz property south of Lucas Valley Road to allow one unit for every 10 acres — totaling 110 units. Also approved rezoning the 75-acre Melone property to allow one unit for every 60 acres.

DEVELOPMENT — Rejected a master plan submitted by John H. Head and Jules Becker to build an eight-unit apartment complex on two acres on Tiburon Boulevard near Altena Street near Greenbrae. The commission said the apartments would be inconsistent with the neighborhood and would be "too massive."

MUIR BEACH — Adopted amendments to the zoning code setting the number of small animals that will be allowed on various lot sizes in the Muir Beach area. For example, 12 duck, chickens or pigeons will be allowed on a 10,000 square foot lot.

ENVIRONMENTAL COORDINATOR — Heard a report on the duties of the county's environmental coordinator and urged closer cooperation with the planning commission and staff.

Platform Shoes Prove Costly

LONDON (UPI) — A pair of black platform shoes with glittering heels cost the wife of pop star Marc Bolan $144 in fines in a London court yesterday.

Showing the shoes to the magistrate St. John Harmsworth, Mrs. June Boan said they caused her involvement in a multiple car crash.

As she tried to stop her Ferrari at traffic lights, she said, the sole of one shoe jammed between the brake and the accelerator pedal.

Classmates Search For Art Student

NEWHALL (UPI) — A group of students joined the search yesterday by sheriff's deputies for an art school coed who disappeared last week when she took her easel and paints into the rough Pico Canyon area west of here.

Constance Marsh, 21, a student at the California Institute of Arts in Valencia, drove her late model Fiat up a dirt road into the canyon. Sheriff's deputies found the car abandoned.

Elevator Traps Cardinal, Others

NEW YORK (AP) — Terence Cardinal Cooke, a priest, a nun and 13 deaf, teen-aged schoolchildren were trapped for an hour in an elevator in midtown Manhattan.

The unusual congregation was formed shortly after the conclusion of an Easter mass the cardinal had offered for the youngsters yesterday afternoon. The program was taped for use Easter Sunday.

After the taping, the group boarded the elevator of the building housing the fourth floor television studio. Cardinal Cooke was bound for other duties and the children were headed for hotdogs and ice cream nearby.

But How's Pat Going To Raise Her Half Of That $467,000?

WASHINGTON — "Hello, Dick. Why the long face?"

"I just got the word we owe $467,000 in back taxes, Pat."

"What do you mean we owe $467,000?"

"You and I. You see, we filed a joint return because we're man and wife. So actually you only owe half — which comes to $233,500.

"WHERE AM I GOING to get $233,500?"

"Look Pat, I have my own problems. I can't worry about where you're going to find your half."

"I don't see why I have to pay half of your back taxes. You're the one who hired those stupid accountants that apparently didn't know what they were doing."

"Now, Pat, you're being unnecessarily harsh. They were only trying to save us taxes. Unfortunately they got caught in a technicality, and it cost us a half-million dollars. After all, nobody's perfect."

"DICK, I DON'T LIKE to say I told you so, but remember when you told me that we only had to pay $792 in 1970 and I said there was something cockeyed with those figures? You told me that all you were doing was what any American citizen is expected to do which was to take full advantage of the tax laws."

"I might have said that."

"Remember what I said to you?"

"No, I don't."

"I said, 'Dick, we could raise $792, but it would be wrong.' It's on your tapes."

"Let's not bring up the tapes, Pat. I still feel that legally Idid the right thing, but apparently the joint congressional committee, and I'm not saying they don't have a right to, disagrees with us."

"I STILL THINK the President of the United States deserves better tax advice than you got."

"Listen, it wasn't my tax lawyers who screwed me up; it was Lyndon Baines Johnson. He was the one who told me I should give my vice presidential papers to the National Archives for a whopping write-off. At the time I thought he was just being a friend, but now I see it was his way of sabotaging me. He never did like me, Pat."

"What about all those other deductions on our apartment in New York City and San Clemente? Was that Johnson's fault, too?"

"That's just politics, Pat. They couldn't beat me at the polls so they're getting back at me through capital gains. Every nickel we deducted was a legitimate item, and if it hadn't been for Watergate we'd be getting a refund now."

"ALL RIGHT, DICK. Even if everything you say is true, where are we going to get $467,000?"

"I was thinking of opening up San Clemente to the public. We could charge $3 a person. People might come over from Disneyland. All the dukes do it in England."

"But that means we'd have to be there all the time, signing autographs. Don't you have any other ideas?"

"We could sell ambassadorships. I'm sure I could get $100,000 for the Court of St. James."

"Well, there is one other way of raising the money but I hesitate to suggest it."

"What is it?"

"The Alka Seltzer people have contacted me about you doing a TV commercial. All you would have to do is drink a glass of fizzy water, look into the camera and say, 'I can't believe we owed the whole thing.'"

ALMANAC

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Today is Tuesday, April 9, the 99th day of 1974 with 266 to follow.

The moon is between full and the last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, and Jupiter. The evening stars are Saturn and Mars.

American artist Charles Burchfield was born April 9, 1893.

Also on this day in history:

In 1865, southern Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered to northern Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse in Virginia.

In 1940, Germany invaded Norway and Denmark in World War II.

In 1963, the U.S. nuclear submarine Thresher went down 220 miles east of Boston in the Atlantic ocean. All 129 men aboard were lost.

A thought for the day: American writer Thomas Paine said: "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

"The Most Normal Hearing That I Have Ever Experienced With a Hearing Aid."

There's nothing half-hearted about the reactions of hearing aid users who've tried the Beltone Etude. Ask them about it, and you'll hear something like . . .

"Better tone — more vowel sounds."

"Fine clear reception — power to spare."

"Telephone pick-up excellent — strong."

"Very clear sound."

"Better understanding" . . . "Satisfactory in every way" . . . "Telephone switch really worked well" . . . the comments are enthusiastic . . . and they all add up to a good sound for just about everyone with a mild, serious or severe loss.

Without question, the Beltone Etude has a lot to offer in the way of clarity . . . and in just plain better hearing!

We'll be happy to see that you receive a free brochure. Or — better yet — why not make a sound comparison? Just call or write: Beltone Hearing Aid Service, 808 Third St., San Rafael. Phone 457-1140.

Don't Go Down Without Struggle; This Hand Proof Of This Point

Don't sneer at the drowning man who clutches at a straw; it's better than going down without a struggle. If you're doubtful about this advice, today's bridge hand will prove the point.

CORRECT DEDUCTION

West correctly deduced that North had five hearts and four spades and that South had four of each major. If North had 4-4, he would have opened with spades instead of hearts; if North had fewer than four spades, he would be unable to jump raise.

Having counted nine hearts in the North-South hands, West had no trouble in calculating that East had a singleton heart. Hence West opened the ace of hearts and led another heart for his partner to ruff.

RETURNS CLUB

East was happy to ruff the second heart and naturally wanted to get another ruff. The best chance was to lead the six of clubs. Perhaps West had the jack of clubs.

South groaned as the club was returned. He just knew that West was going to win a club trick and lead another heart for East to ruff.

Groaning didn't help South. He played a low club and West was astonished to win the trick with the ten of clubs.

West then led another heart, and East's ruff defeated the contract.

JACK OF CLUBS

If you're still looking for that straw, clutch at the jack of clubs. When East returns the six of clubs, South must play his highest club. It seems hopeless, of course, since West should have a high club, but it costs nothing to try.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Cigarette Smoking Increasing Again, Especially Among Young

Publication of the Surgeon General's Report of 1964 linking cigarette smoking with the rising incidence of lung cancer, emphysema, and heart disease motivated almost 10 million people to give up the weed. (Only 18 per cent of physicians now smoke.) Since then, the curve has leveled off and there is evidence that the habit is now on the increase. Furthermore, almost as many teen-age girls as boys are smoking. At this rate, it won't take long for adult women smokers to catch up with adult males. In all probability, the incidence of lung disease will increase.

WHY DO PEOPLE continue to smoke when the serious consequences of the habit are so well-known? Although it is true that not all smokers develop lung cancer, emphysema, or heart disease, the use of cigarettes increases the risk. Apparently, many smokers are willing to take their chances. Unfortunately, nicotine has intense habit-forming qualities.

Those who inhale are in greater danger. And, the hazards increase with the numbers of years the person has smoked and the number of cigarettes used daily. Teen-agers who take up the habit should keep this in mind. Filters and low tar cigarettes help a little, but the latter constitute only 6 per cent of the market. However, even these types of cigarettes aggravate the heart. This is due to the carbon monoxide that is inhaled and not to the tars. Filter cigarettes are of limited value because the best filter is one through which the smoker gets nothing but clean, fresh air.

SMOKERS WHO kick the habit lessen the risk of getting lung cancer. Furthermore, every month of abstinence lowers the risk. According to the American Cancer Society, the risk falls to the same level as nonsmokers within five years for one pack a day users. Giving up cigarettes is not easy. For many people, smoking has become a way of life. They use cigarettes to combat anxiety, depression, and emotional insecurities. Dr. Luther Terry believes that the desire to smoke is greater than the threat of a dreadful disease.

PRESSURE TUBE

REPLY

The tube is filled with air until the pressure is high enough to shut off the flow of blood through the arteries. At this point, the pressure in the tube and arteries is the same and corresponds to the systolic blood pressure. As the air is released, the physician hears the blood returning into the arm.

LUNG REMOVAL

A reader writes: What happens when a lung is removed? Does the cavity fill up with something?

REPLY

The chest wall collapses somewhat and the lung on the other side shifts over to fill in most of the space. Serum fills the remaining space which ultimately is replaced by scar tissue.

SUGAR LEVEL

REPLY

No. On the other hand, the level can be lowered by exercise; when you are aggravated take a walk.

ONSET OF LEUKEMIA

E. J. writes: Does leukemia develop all at once or gradually?

REPLY

Acute types develop rapidly, whereas chronic leukemia has a more insidious onset. But every disease has a beginning, and it is reasonable to assume that there is a period when the individual is healthy one minute and leukemic the next.

ASPIRIN, BAKING SODA

E. W. R. writes: Is citrus fruit or baking soda good for neutralizing aspirin?

REPLY

Baking soda is better because aspirin is an acid and alkalis usually neutralize acids. Citrus fruits contain acetic acid and will not neutralize another acid. There is no need for baking soda unless aspirin causes indigestion.

WATER IN LUNGS

K. N. writes: What causes a water buildup in the lungs?

REPLY

Dropsy from heart disease is the most common cause. Other possibilities include infection (pleurisy), certain kidney disorders, and starvation.

DIFFERENT ORGANS

Mrs. S. writes: After a hysterectomy, is there any chance the woman will develop cancer of the stomach?

REPLY

The same chance as any other woman with or without a uterus. There is no relationship between these organs.

Simon Says Oil Embargo 'A Blessing'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Energy Chief William Simon defended the administration's energy policies today and said the Arab oil embargo may have been a blessing in disguise.

Simon, in testimony before the House legal and monetary affairs subcommittee, said the administration's actions during the energy crisis "were the right ones —and they resulted in the least total impact on the American public."

Simon, chaffing from criticism of his handling of the fuel shortages, said that over the last few months it seemed that more people were concerned with laying blame than with solving the problem.

One of the results of the administration's policies, he said, was to negate the effect of the fuel shortage on the economy.

"Only a small percentage of our total work force —one half of one per cent —lost their jobs because of tte energy crisis," Simon said.

Simon also told the subcommittee the Arab oil embargo, which touched off the energy crisis, "was a blessing in disguise. It crystallized a concern for energy problems which was desperately needed."

He said the embargo came at the right time —a few years earlier and it would have been dismissed as an unimportant inconvenience, a few years later and its impact would have been too large to cope with.

Volker Resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon yesterday accepted the resignation of Paul A. Volcker as undersecretary of the Treasury for monetary affairs. The White House said Volcker will remain on the job until after the June 12-13 meeting in Washington of the International Committee of 20, which is studying proposals for a new international monetary arrangement.

Steps Urged For Birth Control

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — To be successful, birth control programs must be part of broader programs and under local community control, William A. Darity, dean of the School of Public Health of the University of Massachusetts, said yesterday.

Darity, a former board member of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc., also said more minority members must be on the staffs of the programs.

He said studies have indicated a deep-seated belief among blacks that birth control programs are aimed, at least in part, at reducing or eliminating minority group members.

BART Cars Purchase Hit By Advisers

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Bay Area Rapid Transit District Board has been told a $46 million contract for more rail cars was let last year against the recommendation of the engineering consultants.

The contract to provide 100 more cars was awarded to Rohr Corp. of Chula Vista. The board was told yesterday that the three-company consulting firm of Parson Brinckerhoff-Tudor-Bechtel recommended the contract go out for bid.

The directors at the time received an 86-page report from General Manager B. R. Stokes which said BART could save $10.5 million and 20 months of waiting by accepting the Rohr agreement. The report did not contain the recommendation the contract go out for bid.

The board met yesterday to consider criticisms from state legislative analyst A. Alan Post.

The board agreed to two of Post's proposals—that depreciation be included as an item of expense, and that tests to determine what penalties Rohr should pay because its cars use more electricity than promised will be conducted soon.

Merv Griffin Keeps Tape Rolling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Merv Griffin doesn't mind being caught flat-footed.

An inviolate rule on his television show is that no matter what happens, production doesn't stop after the taping starts. A guest may say something outrageous or even walk out, as Richard M. Nixon once did before he was President.

"We never stop the taping," Griffin said. "I don't care if the walls fall down. My orders are to keep the cameras going. Even if I've got egg on my face, that's equally interesting.

"The audience isn't saying 'Merv has egg on his face.' They're saying, "That guest isn't helping Merv at all." Sometimes dullness can be equally as interesting as a hyperactive guest."

In his desperation days at CBS, battling Johnny Carson in the late-night slot, Griffin switched to "theme" shows and now finds them very successful. All of the guests for a show talk about the same subject or represent a group — such as biographers of presidents, prosecuting attorneys, defense attorneys, millionaries, Hollywood couples, nutrition and money. Occasionally he takes the show out of the studio for location specials.

Griffin, 48, is a battle-scarred veteran of the late-night war, during the time networks had talk shows head-to-head. CBS threw him into the pits Aug. 29, 1969, against NBC's Carson and ABC's Joey Bishop. A fourth show, David Frost, originated from New York at that time and the four were in competition for guests.

Griffin didn't make a dent in Carson's entrenched position as Captain Midnight. He was hardly on the air when he and CBS fell out. The bitterness that developed between them was so serious that Griffin didn't speak to CBS programming Vice President Fred Silverman. Network President Robert D. Wood had to act as intermediary.

MERV GRIFFIN
Talk show veteran

In 1970, Griffin moved his CBS show to Los Angeles.

"I came West with great trepidation," he recalled, "but I knew I had to do it. We had four shows fighting for guests in New York. I thought if no one else was going to move I would. We changed the format to themes because no one else would."

Griffin asked to be let out of his CBS contract at the end of 1971. He began his syndicated show for Metromedia on March 13, 1972. He recently signed a new contract guaranteeing the show through April, 1976.

What concerned Griffin about his move West was that talk shows traditiaionally had not shows traditionally had not since his move, Carson has brought the "Tonight" show to California.

"I was worried we couldn't get an audience to sit still for an intelligent conversation," he said.

"The year at CBS was a horror. I think they just went over to the Farmers Market next door and got all the shoppers for an audience. They'd come in with their shopping bags. At the Hollywood Palace now we're not in a theatrical district. People have to seek us out."

Griffin says he has no ground rules for interviewing guests. He believes that when someone agrees to be on the show he has agreed to a probing interview.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., was booked on the show the day the story broke about his history of mental depression — a story that eventually caused Eagleton to step aside as Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1972.

"Eagleton sent back word asking if I was going to talk about it," Griffin said. "I said what are we going to talk about? Tap dancing? I said either we talked about it or the interview was off."

Eagleton appeared on the show.

Nixon walked off Griffin's earlier syndicated show in 1968 when David Susskind, another guest, suggested that many people who voted for Nixon in the 1960 presidential election were religious bigots. Griffin adds that Herbert Klein, Nixon's former communications director, looked at the tape and thought it one of Nixon's best interviews.

Griffin's boyish charm and disarming manner permit him to be provocative without seeming to be a grand inquisitor. He said, "Sometimes I shock myself with the questions."

Griffin's contract doesn't pay him as much as Carson's reputed $4 million, three-year contract with NBC. He won't disclose what he earns. Nevertheless, he is extremely wealthy and runs a burgeoning empire.

Separated from his wife, Julann, Griffin lives in Pebble Beach, Calif. He commutes to Los Angeles to tape all five shows for a week in three days.

"I don't feel the need to be a public person. That's why I take the flyer on the other things. I love the production end so much," Griffin added. "I love my show, but I've been in front of the public for 29 years."

Larkspur Road Widening Plan Impact Less Than Terminal's

Shoreline modification and fill of San Francisco Bay would be the "most significant adverse environmental effects" of proposed widening of East Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Larkspur, according to a report on the project's impact.

Both, however, would be "quite minor when compared to the massive restructuring of the shoreline" needed for construction of the new Larkspur ferry terminal, according to the report.

Alternatives to the project, either not upgrading the roadway or upgrading it in its present two-lane width, would not meet higher use predicted to accompany development of the area, the report said.

"If Larkspur approves the specific plans for development of the (Hutchison) quarry, then the road-widening project becomes an essential element of the plan," the report said.

The 65-page report, prepared for the city by Environmental Impact Planning Corp. of San Francisco, said that plans for landscaping the widened road's median, undergrounding of utility lines and construction of an adjacent bicycle path would help mitigate adverse impact.

The project calls for widening the roadway, presently in a "poor state of repair," from two to four lanes from Highway 101 to the east city limit or about 4,000 feet.

It is expected to cost about $1 million for road improvements and $500,000 for replacement of an existing railroad trestle to accommodate the wider roadway. Funding for the project would come from $355,000 in federal grants, $110,000 in state, county and local gasoline taxes and $535,000 from an assessment district of property owners who will "derive benefits from the project."

The State Public Utilities Commission is expected to provide $400,000 for replacement of the trestle with about $100,000 coming from the assessment district, according to the report.

Plans include street-side parking adjacent to the expanded four-lane roadway and, should future traffic warrant, the road could be converted to six through lanes by eliminating the parking, the report said.

The Larkspur Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on the impact report today at 8 p.m. in city hall.

Party-Giving Cancer Victim Finally Dies

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — A woman who held a soiree for her family and friends in her hospital room last August died yesterday in Sequoia Hospital.

Ruth L. Hoffman, 57, who had cancer "from the top of my head down to my knees," had said that foreknowledge of her death allowed her to plan ahead. She donated her body and eyes to Stanford Medical Center.

Last August, more than 100 people attended a final reunion for her family and friends for which the hospital staff supplied the refreshments.

Memorial services will be Saturday in Conshohocken, Pa. where she lived for many years.

Weicker Figures News To Reagan

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan was vacationing in Arizona when Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., produced in Washington an IRS memo he said showed Reagan was assessed $13,091 in federal income taxes owed for 1962 through 1965.

But Reagan's press secretary, Clyde Walthall, said, "The governor has no knowledge of what Sen. Weicker is talking about."

The report from Washington did not say whether Reagan eventually paid what Weicker said the IRS audit memo showed to be deficiencies of $4,778 in 1962, $3,660 in 1963, $3,541 in 1964, and $1,112 in 1965.

Burton Asks Fund Boost For Rec Area

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — A $20 million appropriation to speed purchase of private land within the Golden Gate National Recreation Area was urged yesterday by Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Fifth District.

The sum is twice the amount proposed by the Nixon administration in the fiscal 1974-75 budget.

The San Francisco congressman urged the increased funding before the House Subcommittee on Interior Appropriations. Early purchase of the private land "would make good fiscal sense in a constantly rising market," he testified.

By buying some of the private land quickly, Burton noted, the government already has gotten some of that land below costs estimated three years ago.

A prime author of the 1972 bill that created the recreation area in Marin and San Francisco, Burton noted the committee already had diverted $16.1 million from other projects to start buying the recreation area. The 1972 bill authorized $61 million for the purchases.

NEBRASKA ELECTION

Men Put Trust In Woman Mayor

CURTIS, Neb. (UPI) — In the Frontier County town of Curtis, men are men and they trust Mrs. Joyce Petersen to run things.

Mrs. Petersen, 30, ex-beauty shop operator, housewife, and mother of two, is the mayor elect.

She didn't have to fight hard for the job. Hers was the only name on the ballot Tuesday. She takes office June 1.

Her idea is to bring people together. As she puts it, "I kind of think of the philosophy, 'Divided we fall, but united we stand.'"

There's no crime to speak of in Curtis, a home-spun town tucked in the middle of sprawling ranches.

But there's government in Curtis, and Mrs. Petersen sometimes worries that it's getting away from the southwestern Nebraska community's 1,166 citizens.

Mrs. Petersen announced for office, conducted a "fair and square campaign", and became the first woman mayor in Frontier County history.

Incumbent Kenneth Nelson, a motel and laundrymat owner who didn't seek another term, got 153 write-in votes. Mrs. Petersen received 197.

"When I attended a council meeting and took a look at things, I decided to run," said the mayor-elect, who will be presiding officer over the all male council.

Since the election, Mrs. Petersen said she has learned to to the political line. She chose carefully her words when speaking of Nelson.

"I felt like...well, I had respect for his thoughts, but when you hold public office, I don't think you should push them on people," she said.

The primary issue in Curtis, she said, is one of "simple good will."

"My basic interest is to work with the people and for them. I'd like to establish good public relations between the council and the people," she said. "My big interest is in developments that happen."

Of course, the affairs of city government will sometimes take her away from her family, but she said her two children, 7 and 4, "think it's great, though they're really too young to know what's going on."

"I'm prepared to give the job all it takes," Mrs. Peterson said "This town has a lot of good possibilities. At $200 a year, I'm not doing this for the money."

Oil Group Asks More Production

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A plan to expand oil production in Saudi Arabia from 9 million barrels a day to 11 million has been approved by the board of directors of the Arabian-American Oil Co., (Aramco) a spokesman for Standard Oil of California said yesterday.

The spokesman, who said the agreement was reached during a secret meeting of the Aramco board here this weekend, pointed out the agreement does not mean the actual oil production would increase that much. The Saudi government has the power to determine actual production levels.

Overtime Pay Action Is Filed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Department of Labor filed suit in U.S. District Court yesterday against the Mexican food company owned by Romana Banuelos, former treasurer of the United States, saying the company made a regular practice for more than two years of not paying overtime to its truck drivers.

The suit asked for an order against the $5 million a year Ramona's Food Products Inc. requiring it to pay overtime for more than 40 hours work a week, and to keep adequate records of employees' hours.

'Hammer' Ends Great Chase

Aaron Belts 715th On Hanging Pitch

Aaron's pursuit of Babe Ruth's once seemingly unbeatable career home run record, a pursuit that took 20 years and nearly 3,000 major league baseball games, ended last night when "The Hammer" hit his 715th.

It happened at 9:07 p.m., in the fourth inning of the Atlanta Braves' 7-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It was right down the middle," moaned Downing. "I was trying to get it down to him—but I didn't."

"Yeah," grinned Aaron. "He just hung it a little too much. I didn't think I hit it all that good, especially into that wind. But I knew it was going out."

"That took a tremendous weight off my back, I'm glad it's over," said Aaron who has been subjected to a tremendous barrage of publicity, some of it critical, since it became apparent a year ago that he was making a run at a record Ruth set without much fanfare 39 years ago.

But Hank Aaron doesn't plan to rest on his laurels. The Braves' aging outfielder immediately set a new goal for himself—getting the 120 more base hits he needs to eclipse Stan Musial's National League record of 3,630.

Aaron, who already held 19 league records going into his 21st season in the majors, set yet another in the second inning last night when he scored from first base on Dusty Baker's double and a Bill Buckner error.

That was his 2,063rd run, breaking a tie with now-retired Willie Mays for the National League record.

Hank Aaron hit 40 home runs last season, most ever by a 39-year-old player, and was only one behind Babe Ruth when this season began.

It was obvious that it wouldn't take him very long to top Ruth and the Braves, anxious to have him hit 714 and 175 in Atlanta, tried to hold him out of this past weekend's three-game series in Cincinnati.

But Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn intervened. He forced the Braves to play Aaron in last Thursday's season-opener and Aaron hit No. 714 in his very first at bat.

Again the Braves tried to bench Aaron to save 715 for Atlanta and again Kuhn intervened. Aaron sat out the second game of the series but played on Sunday and when he went hitless there were charges from some quarters that he didn't really try.

"Let me just say this," Aaron said grimly at the start of a news conference after last night's historic occasion. "I have never given less than my best. (Clay) Kirby made some good pitches on me and that's all there was to it."

As for Kuhn forcing the Braves to play him, Aaron said, "I'm glad it (715) came in Atlanta. I felt after I hit No. 714 in Cincinnati that it would have been the courteous thing to do to let me wait to try to hit 715 in Atlanta."

Aaron's home run last night touched off a raucous celebration in Atlanta Stadium. As Hank circled the bases, the overflow crowd of 53,775 began a lengthy standing ovation, backgrounded by a gaudy fireworks display.

"The only thought that went through my mind at the moment was to be sure to touch all the bases," said Aaron. "I don't think it's really sunk in yet. Maybe, after I've gotten a night's sleep, it will dawn on me what I have done."

In the only other National League game yesterday the San Francisco Giants beat the Cincinnati Reds, 4-3.

In the only American League game the New York Yankees completed a three-game sweep of the Cleveland Indians, 5-3. Ron Blomberg scored the winning run in the seventh on a force play. Yankee starter George Medich allowed Cleveland to take the lead in the fifth on a home run by Oscar Gamble, but the Yankees tied it immediately in the bottom of the inning on Thurman Munson's sacrifice fly.

Hank Called His Shot Like Ruth

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

ATLANTA (UPI) — It was, in a manner of speaking, like something straight out of pure fantasy, with lights blinking, fireworks flashing and a full grown 40-year-old man being hugged by his mother as if he were still her little boy, and oh, how the Babe would've loved it all, particularly for that one little extra touch by Hank Aaron.

He called his shot!

The difference in personalities, and even in their performances, between baseball's new home run king and the old one is so great, so vast, as to be truly incalculable.

When men like Waite Hoyt, who knew Babe Ruth then and knows Hank Aaron now, say it is impossible to compare them, they are telling the truth.

The Babe was loud, gregarious, emotional and profane. Hank Aaron is soft-spoken, basically shy, not at all animated and always careful of his language.

Babe Ruth would've related to Hank Aaron anyway though if for nothing more than what he did during batting practice last night. It would've brought back memories to the Babe, reminding him of that time in the 1932 World Series when with Charlie Root pitching for the Cubs, he stepped out of the batter's box a moment, pointed toward the right field bleachers and then dramatically deposited a home run there.

This was before last night's contest with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Braves were taking batting practice in damp, chilly Atlanta Stadium and everybody in the place was thinking about pretty much the same thing.

Would he, or wouldn't he? Would Hank Aaron hit his 715th home run and break Ruth's record in the ball game coming up, the Braves' home opener, or would he disappoint the crowd of 53,775 and look terrible as he did against the Reds in Cincinnati Sunday night?

Ralph Garr and Dusty Baker, two of Aaron's teammates, looked at all the newsmen and cameramen congregated around the Braves' dugout and the batting cage and Garr said to Aaron,

Aaron, waiting to hit, answered immediately.

Garr looked at Baker, and Baker looked at Garr. They believed, and Aaron didn't let them down, driving the ball over the left field fence his second time up in the fourth inning off Dodger left-hander Al Downing.

When it was all over and the Braves had beaten the Dodgers, 7-4, ending their three-game winning streak and inflicting the first loss of the young season upon them, nobody but the Braves' personnel were permitted in the Atlanta dressing room.

The Braves had opened the champagne and were ready to pour, but Hank Aaron had something he wanted to say first to all his teammates.

"Thank you for being patient," he said, his sincerity moving them. "Thank you for putting up with all that you have —the newspapermen, the photographers and all the other distractions. I know how difficult it was sometimes, and I appreciate the patience you've shown."

Aaron had gotten it off his chest.

History Made With One Mighty Swing

It was as if he were storing all his energy for one mighty swing. He had stood patiently in the batter's box his first time up and watched five pitches go by, four of them out of the strike zone.

This time, he had watched a pitch by Al Downing hit the dirt. Then Henry Louis Aaron unleashed his first swing of the chilly evening and baseball history was made. Home run number 715 was sailing over a fence and one of baseball's mightiest of records had fallen. Babe Ruth was no longer the greatest home run hitter to ever play the game.

A RECORD Atlanta Stadium crowd of 53,775 saw the historic event, although years from now the number of eye witnesses will have risen to 300,000. Millions of fans — like you and me — were able to see it on television, again and again.

We were able to see that the pitch was right in the middle of the plate, about belt high. No one gets away with a pitch like that to Aaron. But Downing had to come in with a pitch. He nad walked Hank the first time up and if he kept the ball out of the strike zone again he would have been booed out of the ballpark. He had to at least give Hank a chance to swing. It only took one.

Aaron had said before the game, in a pre-game extravaganza, that he wanted to get the home run thing over quickly. He was a man of his word. Once history was made, the game itself became so anti-climactic that by the time the Braves had dispatched the Dodgers, 7-4, about one-tenth of the audience remained in the stands.

BOWIE KUHN, baseball commissioner who ruled that Aaron would have to play two of the three road games the Braves had on the front end of their schedule, stayed away. The Atlanta fans, of course, were angered by his decision. They wanted to see Aaron make history in their own ballpark. They booed at the mere mention of his name by his representative, Monte Irvin. I shudder to think what their reaction would have been if Kuhn was there in person had he not chosen to attend a cocktail party in Cleveland. Now that the whole thing is over, Kuhn can get back in his cocoon. If he tries hard enough, he may come out a butterfly yet.

Before Babe Ruth came along, there wasn't really a slugger of his kind. John Franklin Baker picked up the nickname "Home Run" Baker and in his 13-year major league career ending in 1922 he had hit a grand total of 94 home runs.

Then along came Ruth, his 714 home runs amassed in 22 years of baseball, from 1914 to 1935. He was the Sultan of Swat. Then along came Aaron, his 715th homer coming during his 21st season. At 40, Hank has said that this is going to be his last year. Ruth, too, was 40 when he hit his last home run.

BUT NOW, out of the woodwork, will come the detractors of Aaron's feat. They will sneer and declare that Ruth would have had more home runs if he had not been a pitcher for all of his first four years and a good portion of his next two. They will point to the number of at bats and say Aaron had more chances to hit home runs than Ruth. They will say Ruth is still the best home run hitter the game has ever seen. They will still cling tightly to the past. It's such a pity.

Ruth was a great home run hitter. Aaron is a great home run hitter. The simple fact of the matter is: Aaron has hit more home runs in his career than any other ball player, alive or dead. Period. There should be no "buts," no "ifs," no "maybes."

Babe Ruth will not be forgotten now that he's the second best home run hitter of all time. He did too much for baseball for that. So come on, you old-timers. Join the applause for Aaron. He deserves all that he's getting.

AGAINST UNBEATEN GIANTS

Bench Guesses Wrong

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Johnny Bench guessed wrong and counted wrong during a frustrating afternoon against the San Francisco Giants.

"I thought I hit it out. But I guessed wrong," the Cincinnati Reds' slugger said yesterday of his first inning drive that left fielder Gary Matthews caught against the fence.

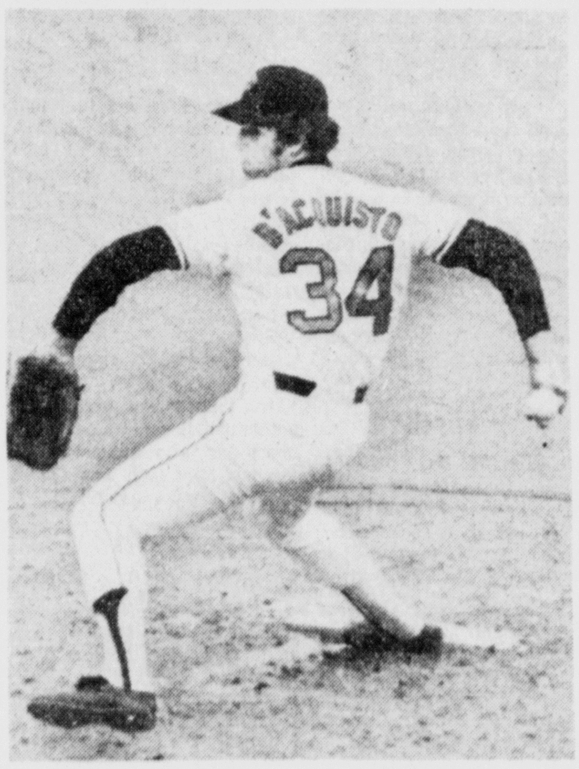
Bench lost an eighth inning argument, when he insisted he'd been walked on a 2-2 count, and ended the game by hitting an easy fly ball with the bases loaded for the out which gave San Francisco a 4-3 victory.

"Give Randy Moffitt the credit for that last one. He's just tough, one of the best relief pitchers in the National League," Bench concluded.

Gary Maddox drove in all the Giants' runs, including three with a fifth inning home run off Roger Nelson, as the unbeaten team rolled to its fourth victory of the young baseball season.

"We're getting the breaks and capitalizing on them. And we're not making many mistakes," said Maddox, who has two homers, seven runs batted in and a .353 batting average.

The pitching has been consistent, though not spectacular. Rookie John D'Acquisto shut out the Reds through six innings yesterday, but Elias Sosa and Moffitt came in from the bullpen to save the victory.



SOMETHING EXTRA — San Francisco Giants' pitcher John D'Acquisto yesterday reached back for that little extra effort before delivering a pitch during the sixth inning at Candlestick Park. (UPI Telephoto)

"I thought D'Acquisto was excellent. He kept his pitches around the plate and threw hard all the way," said manager Charlie Fox. "Ken Rudolph did a great job of handling him, too."

D'Acquisto, the 22-year-old right-hander who was 1-1 in a brief major league trial last year, also praised Rudolph, the Giants' new starting catcher.

"I only threw one pitch on my own, the curve Merv Rettenmund hit for a home run in the seventh. I thought I could get it by him. It was my mistake," he said.

Shortstop Chris Speier knocked down Morgan's infield hit up the middle, keeping Nelson from scoring from second, Morgan was cut down for the second out and D'Acquisto struck out Dan Driessen to end the threat.

A balk by Nelson helped the Giants score in the opening inning. Bobby Bonds walked and went to second when the balk was called on a pickoff attempt. Maddox singled him home.

"I was upset about the balk call, but you can't win any arguments over the umpire's opinion. It was an important play, they may not have scored without it," Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson said.

NEW COLUMN ON BASEBALL TO APPEAR

Hughes will be keeping I-J readers abreast of news involving the San Francisco Giants and Oakland A's.

Although this is Hughes' first year of coaching the Sonoma State team, he is not a newcomer to the coaching ranks. He coached the baseball team at Marin Catholic for nine years before quitting in 1972 to go into the sporting goods business.

His Marin Catholic teams won three Marin County Athletic League championships.

SANTA ROSA — Rain wiped out some of yesterday's games and all of today's action in the Santa Rosa Invitational baseball tournament.

Novato, San Rafael and Petaluma high schools opened play with shutout victories yesterday, but saw their scheduled second games rained out.

Novato bombarded Santa Rosa, 10-0, Petaluma drubbed Terra Linda, 7-0, and San Rafael topped Napa, 3-0. Rain then erased the Novato-Ukiah and San Rafael-Petaluma clashes, the latter with Petaluma leading in the fourth inning, 4-0.

Also still active in the tournament are Rancho Cotate, which defeated St. Vincent, 4-3, after losing to Vintage (Napa), 8-3; and Drake, which topped Montgomery (Santa Rosa), 3-0, before losing to Vallejo, 7-6.

Eliminated with two straight losses were Terra Linda, St. Vincent and San Marin. Terra Linda lost to Napa, 7-1, after falling to Petaluma; St. Vincent lost to Kennedy (Fremont), 6-1,

New York, Kentucky Vie In East Playoff Finals

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

It's the New York Nets against the Kentucky Colonels in the Eastern Division playoff finals of the American Basketball Association while the Utah Stars wait to find out their opponent in the Western Division finals.

All three teams clinched their final round berths with victories last night —the Nets drubbing the Virginia Squires, 109-96, to complete a 4-1 triumph in their series; the Colonels completing a 4-0 sweep of the Carolina Cougars with a 128-119 win; and the Stars trouncing Chamberlainless San Diego, 110-99, to finish a 4-2 victory.

In the other first-round series, the defending champion Indiana Pacers lead the San Antonio Spurs 3-2 with the sixth game scheduled in San Antonio tomorrow night.

San Diego coach Wilt Chamberlain, contending that his contractual obligation to play only for the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association was over because the Lakers had been eliminated from the NBA playoffs, went to court yesterday and asked that an order barring him from a playing role with his Q's be lifted.

The court turned down Wilt the Stilt, saying his obligation runs through the end of the whole NBA season.

Then the Stars turned down the Q's despite a 33-point performance San Diego rookie Bo Lamar. The Stars led by only 95-91 with three minutes left but three clutch 20-footers by Gerald Govan helped Utah pull away.

At Uniondale, N. Y., the Nets' Julius Erving, named the league's "Most Valuable Player" earlier in the day by an overwhelming vote of sports writers and broadcasters, tossed in 21 points in the Nets' win —and also tossed a punch in the direction of the Squires' Cincy Powell.

"I just wanted to scare him, that's all," said Erving later.

Jim Eakins had 38 points for the Squires to lead all scorers, but he lost another battle when he was decked by the Nets' Billy Paultz.

At Lexington, Ky., things were calmer as the Colonels ruthlessly ousted the Cougars. Artis Gilmore, who finished second to Erving in the MVP vote, had 33 points and 20 rebounds for Kentucky. Mac Calvin had 31 for Carolina, but the Cougars fell 18 behind at halftime and never menaced.

NHL STATISTICS

First Tie For Vezina Trophy

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Hockey League yesterday confirmed the first tie in the 48-year history of competition for the Vezina trophy for the top goaltenders in the league.

Thanks to a goal scored by Marcel Dionne of the Detroit Red Wings Sunday night against Chicago with only 66 seconds left in the regular season, the Hawks' netminding crew and the Philadelphia Flyers' goalies finished in a tie, each team allowing 164 goals in the season.

The Hawks and Flyers each will receive the $1,500 cash prize given to the winner. Normally the second-place team receives $750, so Dionne's shot was worth $750 to the Flyers.

The names of No. 1 goalies Bernie Parent of the Flyers and Tony Esposito of the Hawks will be inscribed on the trophy. Reserve goalies Bob Taylor of the Flyers and Mike Veisor of the Hawks did not play in the required 25 games for mention on the trophy.

Parent had the best individual average, 1.89 goals per game, and Esposito was second with 2.04. Parent led in shutouts with 12, one more than Esposito, and set a record by playing 4,314 minutes.

Phil Esposito of the Boston Bruins, Tony's brother, became only the second player in league history to win four straight point-scoring championships and five in his career. Gordie Howe, former Detroit Red Wings star, won six point championships, including four in a row.

Phil Esposito racked up 145 points, including 68 goals which made him the first player in history to lead the league in goals scored for five straight seasons. His point and goal totals were the second highest in history, topped only by his own 152 points and 75 goals in 1970-71.

Phil earned the Art Ross trophy for his scoring championships plus $1,000, plus $500 for leading the scoring in the first half of the season, and another $500 for leading the second half. His total of $2,000 in prize money gave him a total of $10,750 earned this way in the last seven seasons.

The Bruins also took second, third, and fourth in the point scoring derby, only the second time in history all four have come from the same club. Bobby Orr, the league leader in assists with 90, was second in overall scoring with 122 points, 23 less than Esposito, and earned a total of $1,500 in prizes — $500 for being second overall and $500 each for being second in each half of the season.

Ken Hodge was third in scoring with 105 points and Wayne Cashman of Boston fourth with 89, nosing out Western Conference scoring leader Bobby Clarke of the Flyers who had 87 points.

North Golfers Show Terra Linda Field

"Well, the kids from up north came down to the city and showed us how again."

Those were the words of tournament director Bill O'Bayley after Ukiah High School won its second consecutive Terra Linda Invitational Golf Tournament yesterday.

Ukiah shot 398 for five men playing 18 holes over the tough Marin Country Club course to defeat second-place El Cerrito by 16 strokes and third-place Terra Linda by 31. Eighteen schools participated.

Three Ukiah golfers won individual trophies. Paul Weyland was medalist with a two-over-par 74. Ken Carter was second with 76 and Bob Strong tied for third with 78.

Tied with Strong were Mark Morrison of Terra Linda, Tom Lemore of Novato and John Snopkowski of Alameda. Other good scores recorded by Marinites were 79s by San Marin's Tom Poksay, Marin Catholic's Mike Bartolini and San Rafael's Bill Corbett, and 80s by Drake's Mark Lavin and Terra Linda's Marty Lanning.

Following Terra Linda in the scoring were St. Ignatius (San Francisco), 432; Novato, 434; Berkeley, 436; San Rafael, 438; Drake, 444; Hogan (Vallejo), 444; Sonoma, 446; Rancho Cotate 448; Alameda, 449; Lowell (San Francisco), 459; and Crestmoor (San Bruno), 496. Incomplete teams were fielded by Pinole Valley, Marin Catholic, San Marin and Moreau (Hayward).

before losing to Rancho; and San Marin fell to Vallejo, 5-2, and Montgomery, 3-1.

Novato's game was called after five innings due to the 10-run rule, which awards the victory to any team with a 10-run lead at the end of any full inning. Mike Moroski pitched for the Hornets.

John Alejos pitched a two-hitter in Petaluma's victory over Terra Linda, and drove in two runs with a first-inning single.

San Rafael (5-4) got a five-hit, eight-strikeout effort from pitcher Mike Farris. Steve D'Ambra's run-scoring single highlighted a two-run second inning.

Drake (5-6) won behind the pitching of Bill Slaby, who allowed only one walk and three hits while fanning five. Terry Fahey drove in one run with a single and Steve Holt knocked in another with a double.

In their second game, the Pirates rallied for four runs in the top of the seventh, with Slaby hitting a two-run single, but the uprising ended with the tieing run on first base.

Rancho Cotate (1-6) won its first game of the year as relief pitcher Tom Varley squelched a seventh-inning rally by St. Vincent. Alan Lundquist was the winner. Roger Marshall singled home runs in the third and fifth innings for the Cougars.

Redwood '9' Wins; Tam Vanquished

Redwood High School won its opening tournament baseball game yesterday, but Tamalpais High was not so fortunate.

Redwood defeated Hoover (Fresno), 1-0, behind the one-hit pitching of Ed Andersen in the Fresno Tournament, while Tam lost to Oceana (Pacifica) in the Terra Nova Tournament in Pacifica, 6-5 in 10 innings.

Andersen, the Giants' big right-hander, struck out five and walked four. The only hit was a clean single by Bob Glegebrook in the second inning.

Steve Spelman singled home the Giants' only run in the fourth after Phil Bacigalupi walked, moved to second on Marty Frey's sacrifice and took third on a passed ball.

Oceana's winning pitcher, Mike Pasherieo, singled home the winning run against Tam in the 10th. Tam scored four times in the second and carried a 5-2 lead into the seventh before Oceana rallied.

Both teams faced uncertain schedules today in the double-elimination tournaments due to rain.

Baseball Coach Richardson A Winner

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — At 38, Bobby Richardson of South Carolina is still considered one of the youngest college baseball coaches in the nation. He is in his fifth season as mentor of the Gamecocks. In the past four seasons his teams have won 84 games against 64 losses.

Richardson is the former star second baseman for the New York Yankees. He played on seven American League pennant winners in his 10 years with the pin-stripers.

Lake Placid Is Senate's Choice For Olympics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate yesterday urged the International Olympic Committee to pick Lake Placid, N.Y., as the site for the 1980 winter games.

Lake Placid, which hosted the 1932 Winter Olympics, already has been picked by the U. S. Olympic Committee as the official United States "bid city" in the running to host the 1980 winter sports extravaganza.

The International Olympic Committee is scheduled to meet in Vienna in October to make its selection.

By voice vote without dissent or debate, the Senate adopted a resolution extending an official invitation on behalf of Congress to bring the games to the United States.

Czar Kuhn Says Aaron's Mark Good For Baseball

Combined AP & UPI

CLEVELAND — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said last night Hank Aaron's taking over the all-time home run crown from the immortal Babe Ruth was a wonderful thing for baseball and for Aaron.

"I think it is wonderful for Hank and I am proud of him and his dedication," said Kuhn, here to attend a cocktail party given by the Cleveland Indians. "It was one of the greatest achievements in baseball and it was done by one of the greatest men in the game."

Kuhn did not see the historic blast which occurred in the fourth inning at Atlanta Stadium, but Kuhn's representative was in Atlanta to present Aaron with a $3,000 gold watch with the number 715 inscribed in diamonds.

"It's my gift to Hank on behalf of the entire league and everybody in the game," said Kuhn, who forced Braves' manager Eddie Mathews to play in two of the clubs' first three games against the Reds in Cincinnati. Kuhn, who some say did not want to attend the game in Atlanta because his order Aaron had to play was unpopular with Atlanta fans, denied this.

ARLINGTON, Tex. — Tempestuous Jimmy Piersall was fired as promotions director of the Texas Rangers because of a violent run-in Sunday with a sports writer, but was re-hired yesterday by the key man in a combine which bought the club.

The quick switch of jobs raised the possibility of friction between the new owners and Bob Short, who retained 10 per cent ownership and continues to run the club for at least 60 days.

But, the man who hired Piersall less than 24 hours after he was fired quickly erased that idea. Brad Corbett, the Fort Worth industrialist who put together the $9 million deal with Short and who hired Piersall for his Robintech Inc., firm, denied there was any friction.

ENJOYS TRADITION

Jamieson Familiar With Masters Play

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Jim Jamieson knows about the Masters. He knows about it because he grew up in Moline, Ill.

And in Illinois, like in most parts of the Midwest and northern United States, the Masters signals the start of the golf season.

"I remember when I was a kid and the Masters came on TV, I'd take out my clubs and shine 'em up and hope the weather was nice enough to get out and play after the telecast," Jamieson said yesterday.

"It usually wasn't, though. My lifelong dream was to see Augusta National. I never thought I'd end up playing it."

Jamieson's father saw the first Masters in 1934. He was in the army and just happened to be going through Augusta when the late Bobby Jones staged the first event, which was won by Horton Smith.

"I really like playing here," Jamieson said. "I like the people and I like the tradition."

In 1972 he tied for fifth with a 72-hole total of 290, four shots behind Jack Nicklaus, and last year Jamieson rolled in with a three-under-par 285, good for third place two shots behind Tommy Aaron.

Furthermore, Jamieson is playing well now. He finished at 11-under-par 273 Sunday in the Greater Greensboro Open, which placed him alone in sixth place for a $7,932 payoff. He's won $25,541 this year despite playing since the Phoenix Open with a broken right thumb.

He fell down the stairs in Phoenix going for a newspaper and chipped the thumb.

"A doctor told me last week that as much pressure as I put on it, it'll take another six to eight months to completely heal," Jamieson said.

"I like it for the same reason (Lee) Trevino doesn't," he said. "He likes the U.S. Open because he's played well in that tournament. I've never done a thing in the Open. Where you play well is where you like it."

FISH AND GAME

By AL GIDDINGS

Striped Bass Angling Slows In San Pablo

The striped bass fishing in San Pablo Bay was pretty slow over the weekend. About a half dozen bass were logged through the Loch Lomond harbor. Of course there's always a fish story.

Don Feifer from the East Bay gave it a try with two cronies. Fishing was slow, so he started using a small hook setup with one grass shrimp as bait, going for flounders. His two buddies continued to use ghost shrimp and mudsuckers fishing off China Camp. You know what happened? Don hooked into and landed a 41-pound striper; his buddies got nothing. A 41-pounder is some fish!

THE TROLLING was poor at all areas with the water just too cold and too muddy for good striper fishing, but the sturgeon fishing was considered excellent. About 15 sturgeon were logged. They went to 80 pounds. About all of these catches were made near the Richmond Bridge or off China Camp. The trollers reported lots of big sturgeon jumping at the bridge.

Some of the kids have been catching small legal sized stripers off the rocks and shoreline of the bay. A few days of sunshine and the small bass fishery should really pick up. And there are lots of perch in most areas of the bay close to shore, with the perch spawning season in full swing. Use grass shrimp, but you will have to get your order in early. The fresh water pouring down from the Delta moves the shrimp lower down the bay, and few are being caught by the bait draggers right now.

Not much of a report on salmon. All the anglers I know said it was rough and scary outside The Gate.

THE WILD TURKEY season opens next Saturday in the counties of Alpine, Butte, Calaveras, Colusa, El Dorado, Fresno, Glenn, Kern, Lake, Lassen, Mendocino, Monterey, Nevada, Placer, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz,Shasta, Tehema, Trinity, Tulare and Yuba. It's supposed to be a good year with a fine crop of young gobblers with clearly visible beards.

The season opens one-half hour before sunrise, Saturday, and will run through April 28. Tom turkeys are the targets for shotguns or bows and arrows. You'll need a good turkey call. The limit is one Tom and you will have to be lucky. Most hunters never see a bird. You've got to scout out the country, find some bird sign, build a blind, and call them hopefully to you. You'll feel like a nut.

TOMALES BAY unexpectedly cleared up after the muddy waters from the rain. The perch fishermen again had a ball catching redtails and yellowtails off Millerton Point. I had some redtail filets and they are excellent fried.

Trout fishing is on the upswing with Bon Tempe, Lagunitas, Phoenix, Rodeo Lagoon and Stafford lakes getting plants of catchables almost each week. But remember, the streams now listed in the North Coast District in the fishing regulations do not open this year until May 25. Every week, the game wardens have been issuing citations to people for fishing in the closed stream areas. It's all written in the Fishing Regulations Booklet under section 21.50(b) on page 22.

A COUPLE OF NOTES on trout fishing:

A few years back while deer hunting in the Sierra, I came upon Coburn Lake and it was just loaded with big trout. I couldn't wait to get back to camp for a fishing rod. In fact, the whole hunting crew went fishing. These fish were monsters. Guess what? We didn't get a fish! The lightest leader material that any of us had was six-pound test. The trout in those clear waters could see the leader. On another day, when we cut down to a pound and one-quarter test leaders, we did fine.

Another time I went to French Lake in Nevada County. Trout about 10 inches long were everywhere. When you tossed your line in, 40 fish would rush to the bait. . .a fisherman's dream. But none would take the bait. In this case, we eventually had to tie leaders with one-half pound test tippets to be successful. Even then, we had to use a size 12 gold hook with a turned in eye so as to completely cover all of the hook with the single egg. We used no sinkers, letting the egg naturally sink. After two fish or so, we had to tie a new leader setup. Trout are smart and wary; you've got to fool them.

STUNT BALLET ON SNOW

Mike Lund and Pat Karnick of Alpental, Wash. competed in the stunt ballet event of the Western Freestyle Championship last month at Heavenly Valley. Heavenly will host this type of action Thursday through Saturday in the World Freestyle Championships. Approximately 100 of the top "hot dog" skiers in the United States are expected to compete. Stunt ballet will be held Thursday, aerial acrobatics Friday and mogul freestyle finals Saturday. All events start at noon. The competition is sponsored by Chevrolet, Skiing Magazine and Diet Pepsi.

Computer Assists Blackaller

Hank Easom had a yacht. Tom Blackaller had a computer. You know who won.

Blackaller, sailing for the St. Francis Yacht Club of San Francisco, directed his sophisticated yacht Finesse II to a decisive victory over Tiburon's Easom yesterday in the eighth San Francisco Cup challenge race on the bay.

Easom, representing the San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, was challenging for the trophy with his 37-year-old wooden yacht Yucca, which turned out to be no match for Finesse, with its computer-designed sail arrangement and hull design.

Finesse won all three races, eliminating the need for any competition today in the best-of-five series.

Luck was a factor in the first race, as Finesse won by a whopping five minutes and 20 seconds after Yucca's spinnaker became tangled in the wind, forcing Easom's crew to lose precious time hauling it down and raising it up again.

The breaks were reversed in the second race, but Finesse won anyway in 1:38. Easom forced Blackaller outside of a buoy, making him restart, but Blackaller still caught up.

The third race was decided in 2:45, with Blackaller ahead in his yacht, which has been virtually unbeatable since appearing on the bay this year.

New York Mayor Sends A Message

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Mayor Abe Beame sent Hank Aaron a telegram last night following his record 715th home run.

The telegram said, in part, "New York has always held a special place for those athletes who have, during their time, achieved greatness. But, perhaps even more important, is the very special niche New Yorkers reserve for those athletes who conduct themselves as champions off the playing field as well as on. You have always been one of those rare persons."

Fogle's 11 Goals Set Lacrosse Mark

Steve Fogle's 11-goal performance Saturday is a single-game scoring record for Ira Markwett Junior League lacrosse play, league officials have announced.

Fogle broke the old record of eight which he shared with Alan Little of Brine Terra Linda as he led the Italian Athletic Club to a 26-1 victory over host San Francisco.

Corte Maderan Wins In Roller Skating

REDWOOD CITY — Robbie Stewart of Corte Madera won three times Sunday in the Bay Area Olympics competition here as the Marin Roller Skating Club placed in 10 events.

Stewart, 14, won the freestyle, the intermediate figures and (with Liz Rau of Corte Madera) the junior dance. Marin's other winner was Steve Williams, 5, of San Rafael, who took the juvenile Class B boys freestyle.

Reggie, A's Vs. Royals Tonight

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Explosive Reggie Jackson meets the explosive Kansas City Royals tonight at 5:30.

"Reggie is carrying the load for us now," admits Oakland A's manager Alvin Dark. "When Gene Tenace, Deron Johnson and Billy North start hitting, Reggie won't have to carry as much of a load."

Jackson, the American League's Most Valuable Player last baseball season, belted three home runs and drove in eight runs as the A's won two of three games against Texas in the opening series of the year.

"I don't think I'm carrying the load. We've got a long way to go, another 159 games. One series doesn't make a season," said Jackson.

Tenace, Johnson and North were a combined 1-for-36 against Texas but are expected to remain in the starting lineup. Jim Hunter, 1-0, is scheduled to pitch against the Royals' Paul Splittorff, 0-0, in the opener of the two-game series.

Marin Swimmers Vs. Ex-Mates

In a flagrant case of biting the hand that once fed them, Rick DeMont and Robin Backhaus will be swimming against the Marin Aquatic Club when the 1974 short course Nationals begin tomorrow in Dallas, Tex.

An 11-member contingent from Marin departed Sunday for the four-day Amateur Athletic Union meet, and for the first time in two years it did not include the club's two most famous products.

Instead, DeMont and Backhaus will be swimming for the University of Washington, as will another Marin A.C. swimmer, Doug Northway. The meet is open both to AAU clubs and to colleges.

A college team, the University of Southern California, won the meet last year and is favored to repeat. USC dethroned six-time champion Indiana in the recent collegiate championships.

Marin A.C. was fifth last year. "We probably won't finish as high without Rick 'n Robin," said coach Don Swartz, "but we still should do well."

The women's contingent is looking forward to its finest performance. Maura Campion heads the group. She is entered in the 100 and 200-yard butterfly events, 100 and 500 freestyles, and 200 and 400 individual medleys, but will scratch from two events upon reaching Dallas, since competitors are limited to four individual races.

Julie Waters and Lynne Morrill are entered in the 100 and 200 backstrokes. Jo Hislop will compete in the 100, 200 and 500 frees. Else Gunsten is in the 1,650 free, and Cyndi Salvisberg is in the 200 fly.

A high finish is expected from the 800 free relay team of Gunsten, Campion, Morrill and Hislop.

On the men's side, Spencer Eldred and Scott Dicker will swim the 200 breast, Dick Pattengale the 200 and 500 frees, Terry Sutton the 500 and 1,650 frees and Art Morrill the 100 breast, 200 breast and 200 I.M. Morrill will compete unattached to preserve his high school eligibility.

The meet is being held at the same pool, the Alfred J. Loos Swimming Center, where DeMont gained national recognition two years ago by finishing third in the 1,650 free. Cheered by that performance, he went on to make the U.S. Olympic team.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Variety Of Federal Securities Offered

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Would you answer the following questions? What is the difference between Treasury Bonds and Treasury Bills? How can I purchase these or agency debt issues directly without brokers' fees? What is the smallest amount I can purchase at one time? How much do the above securities yield? — A.A.

A. The Treasury offers three types of marketable securities: bonds, notes and bills. These three are distinct primarily in the length of their maturities. Bills, which are auctioned weekly and monthly, are offered in three, six, nine and 12-month maturities; notes mature in one year up to six years and bonds have a life of five years or more. At a recent auction of Treasury bills the average yield was up sharply to 8.3 per cent on three-month paper and 8.2 per cent for six months. A recent monthly auction on the nine and 12-month bills resulted in yields of 8.3 per cent and 8.4 per cent, respectively. Treasury bills are sold on a discounted basis; that is, with interest refunded at time of purchase, in $10,000 minimum amounts. Forms for submitting noncompetitive tender offers are available through the 12 Federal Reserve banks or one of the 24 branch offices. There are no additional fees charged for such purchases.

Treasury bonds and notes are available in $1,000 denominations. These are normally offered by the Treasury quarterly in January, April, July and October and may be purchased at issue in the same manner as bills — if the Treasury includes a cash offering in the refunding operation. Yields on Treasury bonds and notes range from 5.2 per cent to 8.7 per cent in the secondary or resale market.

The various government agencies and affiliated enterprises offer a wide variety of debt securities with minimum denominations ranging from $1,000 on Federal Land Bank bonds to $100,000 for Farmers Home Administration bonds. Yields on these securities, many of which are available directly through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, range from 7.3 per cent to 8.9 per cent in the resale market.

Renault 17TL (left) and 15 Coupe are among the new line of nine sedan, coupe and station wagon models in three different series offered for 1974. The new Renaults feature four-cylinder front-wheel drive engines which eliminate the usual drive shaft bulge in floor. The unusual three-way hardtop/soft-top convertible is available on the 17TL two-door coupe, offered with four-speed manual transmission. Company Finds Humor Often Creeps Into Insurance Claims Claims are normally the most serious part of the insurance business, but bumor creeps in now and then, according to Prudential Insurance Company's Western Home Office in Los Angeles.

An airplane hit the house and came in.

While dancing in the navy, someone stepped on my hand.

I broke my foot when I jumped from a 10-foot bank to get down in a ditch so I could get up a tree.

Fractured 37 ribs in an accident.

I fell from the ceiling at home and I am nervous to work now.

Hernia, from pulling a cork out of a bottle.

I had the flue with a small touch of ammonia.

Fractured jaw. Hit by a person who must have thought I was someone else.

Romantic Flavor (Rheumatic Fever).

My downfall occurred on the stairway.

I wake up unconscious.

Earnings Reports Boost Stocks In Slow Trading

There was no major development in the news to reverse the downward trend of recent sessions. However, a number of companies announced favorable net earnings for the first quarter.

Earlier, analysts had expressed concern about the rising interest rates and the shaky position of the Meir administration in Israel.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber was the most active stock, unchanged at 16 ⅝ on a volume of 71,800 shares. The Southern Company was second, off ¼ at 15 ⅝.

Prices were slightly lower on the American Stock Exchange.

AT CARNEGIE HALL

Sinatra Makes Smash Return

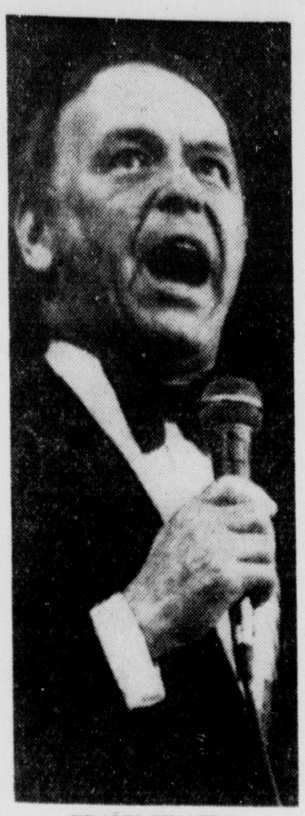
NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Sinatra played Carnegie Hall last night, a landmark performance of his comeback season that will take him on a nationwide tour beginning this week.

Backed by a 50-piece orchestra complete with harp, bathed in hot pink, ultraviolet blue and golden glow spotlights, amplified by two truckloads of equipment, the 56-year-old singer topped his recent network television special. He was more vital, more spontaneous, and exhibited all the best of his vocal style—careful phrasing, controlled emotionalism and big effects that eletrified the spinal nerves of his hearers.

It is a $3 million show and Frankie mentioned the tab only because a stool he perched on briefly was shaky and hardly worth the price. He donated his talents for the Carnegie Program, a $100-a-seat benefit for Variety Clubs International, a show business fraternity that has raised $265 million for children's charities in 47 years. Sinatra admitted to the audience that he always has been a soft touch for underprivileged and handicaped kids.

He said he also was a pushover for New York because "I've had some of my best fights here." And masses of New York celebrities, headed by Mayor and Mrs. Abraham Beame, turned out to salute him in his first appearance here since 1970. It was formal attire all the way for "Blue Eyes"—right up to the rafters of the venerable hall.

Sinatra, a little thicker in the midsection but still trim, strutted in a dinner suit that was a good luck gift from Sammy Davis Jr. He was at his best in his old repertoire—"You Will Be My Music", "I've Got You Under My Skin", "My Way", "That's Life"—a standiing ovation for this one—and "I Get A Kick Out of You". But he was equally successful in "Send In The Clowns" from the current Broadway hit, "A Little Night Music."



FRANK SINATRA
On comeback trail

"I really pride myself on being a saloon singer," he confided before launching into a medley of torchy songs repeatedly interrupted by applause. When his voice, which he has used professionally for 37 years, showed a little drynness, he sipped a glass of Mouton Cadet wine and wished the audience could join him. But the audience was already high enough on Frankie.

Sinatra, who sang for exactly an hour, filled out the show with a 45-minute prelude with Peter Duchin conducting the orchestra from the piano, a sensational troupe of minstrel-type black dancers called The Lockers, and a stand-up comic, Pat Henry. The latter lacked the fine theatrical taste that marked the rest of the evening.

New Energy Czar Is Expected Shortly

BALTIMORE (UPI) — John C. Sawhill, deputy director of the Federal Energy Office, soon will be named director of the government's energy program, replacing William E. Simon, the Baltimore Sun reported today.

Announcement of the appointment is expected in Washington this week, the Sun said. Simon is expected to become Secretary of the Treasury, succeeding George P. Schultz.

Open Files Favored By Kelley

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Individuals should be allowed to inspect FBI files on them so long as the secrecy of the agency's informants can be protected, FBI Director Clarence O. Kelley said today.

Interviwed on the NBC Today program, Kelley also said he believed former Director J. Edgar Hoover was justified in tactics aimed at disruption of "new left" activist groups in the last years of his life.

He said the FBI has "chosen to believe" that kidnaped Patricia Hearst is alive, and he thinks her parents are the best judge as to whether she has joined forces with her captors, the Symbionese Liberation Army.

"Absolutely", Kelley said when asked if he would like to see citizens allowed to inspect their files if informants could be protected. "I don't think there is any question. We'll try to do it if we possibly can.

"Informants are most important to us as an investigative aid, and they have been told their names are confidential," Kelley said. "The only way is to go through the files and remove the identities of the informants."

While agreeing that Hoover was right in not only investigating but setting out to disrupt "new left" activist groups in the last years of his long tenure, Kelley said the policy will not be used again.

"I know no more than you do as to whether she is alive," he said when asked about Miss Hearst.

"We choose to believe she is alive," he said. "We're going to continue to investigate the case. We are going to continue to try to get her back home unharmed and actually our tactics will not change a bit."

Miss Hearst, in a recent tape recorded message to her parents, said she had been converted to the thinking of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Ranger's Widow Relates Events On The Morning Of His Murder

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Speaking through her tears, the widow of a national park ranger told a jury yesterday of her husband's predawn departure to look for poachers and how she learned a few hours later that he had been murdered at Point Reyes National Seashore.

Mrs. Kenneth Patrick was testifying in the federal murder trial of Veronza Leon Bowers, who is accused in the murder of the first National Park ranger slain in the line of duty last Aug. 5.

Mrs. Patrick, the mother of three, said her husband, 40, went out at 5:15 a.m. looking for poachers, almost two hours before he was scheduled to work.

Although her husband failed to return at 7 a.m. to show a new ranger around, Mrs. Patrick said she didn't know anything was wrong until she heard another ranger's wife, Joy Gifford, put out a call for aid from the sheriff's office on a radio band.

At first no one would take Mrs. Patrick to the shooting scene, so, she said, "I finally told Joy she was going to have to take me up there or I was going to call somebody who would.

"Then she called up the ranger office and then she turned to me and told me Ken had been killed."

In his opening statement, Assistant U.S. Atty. John Milano claimed the government would prove Bowers pumped two bullets into Patrick, then stood over him and fired a fatal "coup de grace," to deliberately kill the ranger.

But defense attorney Marvin Stender told the jury of nine women and three men there was no evidence linking Bowers, 28, to the killing and that the murderer is "most likely a local resident of the area."

Bowers and Alan W. Veale, 24, were indicted last Sept. 27 on charges of murder in the ranger's death. Veale is to be tried later.

Milano contended that Bowers, Veale and another friend, Jonathan Shoher, went to Pt. Reyes to poach deer with a crossbow Aug. 5. He said Bowers shot Patrick when the patrolling ranger stopped them for questioning.

"Bowers took the .9-mm handgun he had ready and shot the ranger in the chest," Milano said. "Patrick staggered back and dropped his flashlight. Bowers fired again, hitting Patrick in the hand.

"We can offer proof that Mr. Bowers then did a deliberate thing," said the prosecutor. "He postured himself above the roadway and fired a third shot, a coup de grace into Patrick's right chest.

"Patrick was dead — the first time in history that a U.S. Park Ranger had been murdered."

Milano said Bowers left some glasses by the roadside, and said four cross bolts — arrows — were found in the brush near the body along with three expended cartridge casings.

Stender said evidence will show Bowers did own and keep guns, including a .9-mm hand gun, as well as a cross-bow and archery equipment. But he said the FBI would testify the .9-mm gun found at Bowers' home was not the one which fired the fatal shot.

The attorney said a latent fingerprint found on one of the cross bolts could not be matched up with Bowers or any associates and the cast of a boot print found on the trail near the ranger's body did not match that of the defendant.

"The person responsbile for Patrick's death was most likely a resident of the area and there's absolutely no reason or sense to believe this person had any connection with the use of a cross bow," Stender said.

Meeting On Driver Pay Advanced

Golden Gate Bridge District directors will review a new contract for bus drivers, offering a 15.5 per cent pay hike over the next two years and a cost-of-living increase tomorrow instead of Thursday.

The meeting of the rules, policy and industrial relations committee will be at 10 a.m. in toll plaza offices. The issue also will come before the finance-auditing committee at 10 a.m. Thursday and before the full board at 10 a.m. Friday.

The rules and police committee originally had been scheduled to meet Thursday after the finance committee, but decided several hours will be needed to discuss the contract.

The new contract will put the average driver's annual salary and benefits at roughly $23,000. Drivers approved the contract a week ago Sunday, hours before a threatened strike.

New Ideas Help Beat High College Costs

By KENNETH G. GEHRET
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

College is getting more and more expensive in the U.S. these days — but it's not beyond reach.

Costs shot up 34 per cent at public institutions and 41 per cent at private ones, between 1969-1973. Competition for scholarships is increasing.

And yet there are ways to pay those bills. Some involve new approaches that offer great promise.

One way to cut expenses is for students to go to school in their home states. This doesn't necessarily mean living at home, though that would reduce costs further. Thirty-two states now offer tuition aid to their own needy students. A family need not be at the poverty level to qualify. In Wisconsin, for example, a student is eligible if family income, after federal tax-form deductions, does not exceed $12,000. If two or more children are in college at the same time, a higher income is allowed. Grants range from $300 to $900 per year.

This kind of student aid is fast expanding. Funds available are expected to increase sizeably as the result of a new federal program that matches state funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Although grants of this type are available only to state residents, the definition of "resident" is changing. Courts are loosening the meaning of the term in cases being brought by out-of-state students attending public universities. The later traditionally have charged state residents less than nonresidents. Now some students have won decisions that permit them to establish residency, thereby entitling them to reduced tuition charges. For example, one year on campus is sufficient for that purpose in the state of Washington.

State assistance also is available to veterans, nursing and health-care students, and other categories.

Another development in the public sector is movement toward a "common market." Minnesota and Wisconsin last year agreed to grant students from either state the low resident-tuition rate, rather than the out-of-state rate. While this is the first such arrangement, officials in higher education expect a trend to take shape.

Of more immediate interest are existing federal programs. Although undergoing rapid change, they offer a major source of funds for large numbers of students. A lion's share of this money is designated for minority-group members. But middle-class students, hardest hit by galloping inflation, are now getting a break too. Congress recently removed the "needs test" on the Guaranteed Student Loan Program for students from families with adjusted incomes under $15,000, thus permitting more middle-class students to qualify.

Newest and initially a most promising federal-aid program is Basic Opportunity Grants (BOG). Authorized in 1972, BOG was designed as a "floor" on which other aid could be built to meet a student's particular financial needs.

Work-study, loans scholarships, and other money could be fashioned into an individual package. The Office of Education estimates that in the current year some 275,000 students are sharing $90 million under this program.

Still, red tape has posed problems for students and colleges using BOG. Grants are limited this year to freshmen. Both freshmen and sophomores will be eligible next fall. The administration has asked Congress for a $1.3 billion GOB funding. Interested students should consult college offices of admission and financial aid to see what kind of aid package can be put together, drawing on federal and other sources.

At many colleges and universities there is new emphasis on merit scholarships. These "no need" grants are aimed at the middle-income families that increasingly are finding college virtually out of reach.

New York University, for example, is embarking on a program for next fall which will provide 500 to 600 scholarships averaging $1,000 each, designed specifically for families in the $12,000 to $20,000 income range. Also, Texas Christian University is offering 200 special-achievement awards of $500 to $2,100 each.

Another way to trim out-of-pocket costs is to enroll in a cooperative-education program. Increasing numbers of colleges now have five-year courses of study that alternate periods on campus with periods on the job. An estimated 700 colleges either have co-op plans under way or are in the process of organizing them. When all are in motion, some 90,000 to 100,000 students will be involved.

Still another cost-cutting option open to students is that of reducing the number of college years. Three-year programs are under study and in the experimental phase in several places. Meanwhile, the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) is gaining wider acceptance across the U.S., enabling students to win advanced standing in college for experience and general knowledge.

Job or military experience, individual study and special skills could add up to the equivalent of a year or more of college study. CLEP is administered by the College Entrance Examination Board, 888 Seventh Avenue, New York 10019.

Churches Plan March For Farm Workers

Twelve Marin County Protestant and Catholic churches will hold a Good Friday march in Tiburon to dramatize the case of California farm workers, according to Betty Volz of the Marin Friends of Farm Workers.

Marchers carrying flags and banners and a 16-foot wooden cross will leave Westminster Presbyterian Church in Tiburon at 4 p.m. and walk to Blackie's Pasture.

A service will be held there at 5 p.m. with scripture reading, litanies, songs and short meditations prepared by members and clergy of participating churches.
